Russian Berlin 'Deal' Reported

Senate Ends Recess, Sets Hearings on Bill Backlog

Raising of Wage Rate, Funds For Flood Control On Day's Agenda

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Eighty-first Congress, in session for three months, has so far enacted very little of President Truman's legislative program, either foreign or domestic, a survey showed yesterday.

Originally leaders aimed at a six-months session but there is increasing talk that a special session may be necessary, particularly in view of the fact that the knotty problems of foreign aid funds, the Atlantic Pact and the arming of this Nation's free world partners still remain to be discussed.

The last half of the regular 1949 session begins today, with only the Senate working. Both houses recessed for the Easter holiday Thursday night but the House is taking 10 days off. The Senators come back today.

Malmedy Hearing Planned

Senate committees hope to get caught up on some of their work with hearings opening today on appropriations for the Agriculture Department and for the Army's flood control work and on the Administration's bill to raise the minimum wage rate from 40 to 75 cents an hour.

An Armed Services Subcommittee is scheduled to open an investigation of alleged Army third-degree methods in probing the Malmedy massacre case, with Army Secretary Royall on the witness stand.

At noon the Senators will go into regular session but it probably won't last long, for the Senate always knocks off early on the day the baseball season opens.

House Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) said Thursday that Congress has passed 38 public and 11 private laws. Of the 38 public laws passed, however, only three or four may be said to be part of President Truman's original "Fair Deal" program.

Great Bulk Remains

The great bulk of President Truman's program as outlined in his message to Congress January 5 is still a long way from enactment.

Congress so far has refused to enact Mr. Truman's anti-inflation points. Instead, it continued the anti-inflation program of voluntary controls as developed by the Eightieth Congress. The President's export control powers were continued.

Rent control was strengthened and improved in a bill continuing it for 15 months.

Other major pieces of legislation were bills raising the President's salary, giving emergency relief to storm-smitten Western States, authorizing the Air Force to build a radar warning network around the country, and furnishing aid to refugees from the Palestine fighting.

But these vital points of the Bogota, Colombia, April 17 (U.P.).—Soldiers clashed with some 200 armed civilians in a bloody battle a few miles northeast of here, the government announced tonight.

The clash occurred in the outskirts of a village in Boyaca Province, which had been sacked and burned by the raiders before the army intervened.

First reports indicated 30 to 40 persons may have been killed.

Council Rule Of America Proposed

By the United Press

A sweeping Government reorganization that would concentrate legislative and executive power in a supreme national council was proposed yesterday in a book published by the Brookings Institution.

The national council would pass laws, choose the President and his assistants and set general policy. The present House of Representatives would be abolished but the Senate would be retained with curtailed powers.

The proposal, which would require wholesale amendment of the Constitution, was made by Arthur C. Millspaugh, former State Department official and political scientist at Johns Hopkins University.

H. G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, emphasized in a preface that the purpose of the book is "to stimulate, clarify and focus discussion" on a number of "highly debatable issues." Millspaugh's recommendations are "in no sense to be regarded as an institutional pronouncement," he said.

Millspaugh called the present United States governmental setup an "eighteenth century government."

When the founding fathers established the government, he said, their primary aim was to "form a more perfect union." That objective has long since been fulfilled, Millspaugh said, and now the government should be stream-

4000 Arrive For Opening of DAR Congress

By Norma Lanum
Post Reporter

Close to 4000 Daughters of the American Revolution arrived in Washington over the weekend to attend the fifty-eighth Continental Congress which opens at 8:30 p. m. today at Constitution Hall.

Early arrivals paid homage yesterday to members who died during the past and also officially opened the new Texas Music Room at Memorial Continental Hall.

At the memorial services at Constitution Hall, eulogies and prayers were spoken for the 271 Daughters who have died since last April.

Special tribute was paid Mrs. Edmund S. Roberts of Anne Hutchinson Chapter, New York, who was one of the charter members. Only 15 are living now. Mrs. Raymond G. Kimbell of Chicago, Ill., spoke in her behalf.

Makes Principal Address

Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne of Brookville, Ind., president of the society, gave the principal address of the afternoon. The chaplain general, Mrs. Robert Keene Arnold of Versailles, Ky., offered the prayers and Mrs. J. Harold Grimes of Martinsville, Ind., and Mrs. John S. Heaume of Springfield, Ohio, paid homage to the society's former national officers and State regents who have died during the past year. Mezzo-Soprano Henriette Bagger Plum sang.

Following the services, Mrs. O'Byrne placed a wreath at Founders' Memorial Monument. Then the beribboned and corsaged Daughters walked over to the adjacent Continental Hall where the Texas Music Room was dedicated and opened.

The Texas Society of the DAR bought the second floor room when the Hall was built in 1910 and has devoted the past two years to furnishing and decorating it as an early Empire period music room.

A Golden Anniversary project for the State Society, the redecoration has been under the management of State regent Mrs. Edward Rowland Barrow of Houston and State Room Chairman Mrs. Frank

Thousands Worship at Easter Rites

Templar and Fort Lincoln Cemetery Sunrise Services Attract 36,000

By Martha Hall
Post Reporter

Christian thousands in Greater Washington churches and cathedrals and at sunrise services yesterday rejoiced at Christ's resurrection at Easter Sunday rites.

Those who got up to attend sunrise services shivered in a 36-degree chill as the sun rose at 5:28 a. m. Many of the women wore fur coats. Easter bonnets were obscured by warm head scarves. The sky was cloudless and there was a light breeze.

At 9:30 a. m. the temperature had risen to 43 degrees, but a penetrating 20-mile-an-hour wind was blowing. By the time crowds were leaving church at 12:30 the bright sun had brought the temperature up to 51. The wind was down to 10 miles an hour.

Extra Services Held

Many of the churches scheduled extra services for the day and opened auxiliary rooms where overflow congregations heard sermons over public address systems.

In spite of the provisions for Easter crowds it was a case of standing room only at several of the churches.

An estimated 25,000 persons attended the eighth annual sunrise service at Fort Lincoln Cemetery, Bladensburg rd. and the District Line. Officials said the crowd was smaller than last year, probably because of the cold weather.

Shortly after the sun rose over Fort Lincoln the congregation joined in singing the traditional Easter hymn "Christ the Lord Is Risen Today." The Rev. Fred G. Holloway, president of Drew University, Madison, N. J., delivered the sermon and Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) read the scripture. The service was sponsored by the Organized Bible Class Association of Washington, D. C.

500 at Jefferson Memorial

At the Jefferson Memorial about 500 persons attended a dawn service sponsored by the Washington Federation of Christian Youth. The Rev. Dr. Carl Heath Kopf, pastor of First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., told the congregation that "Easter is full of the good news of another chance to do better."

What seems like death or failure may be a new beginning on a higher level, he said, pointing out that this was so with Jesus. "So it can be for us if we are risen with Him, seeking those things which are above. Eternal life begins now, but nobody knows where it ends," Dr. Kopf said.

An estimated 11,000 persons went to a service at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery. Black-and-white-plumed Knights Templar marched into the amphitheater as the United States Marine Band played "Onward Christian Soldiers."

The Rev. Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, professor of systematic theology at the Lutheran Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, Pa., told the

Sen. Smith Urges Chance for Women At Peacemaking

By the United Press

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) suggested last night that women of the United States, Britain, France "and even Russia" hold a world conference in an effort to find the international peace that has eluded their menfolk.

"The men have been given their chance," she said in a radio interview. "Why not let women have theirs?"

Catholics Ask Health Plan Operating on Voluntary Basis

Three national Catholic organizations have proposed a "voluntary approach to a national health program" in place of the Administration's compulsory health insurance plan, which they vigorously oppose.

The proposal advocated by the three groups—the National Catholic Welfare Conference's Bureau of Health and Hospitals, the National Conference of Catholic Charities, and the Catholic Hospital Association—stresses State participation in voluntary insurance plans.

Meanwhile Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) of the Senate Labor Committee said he expects President Truman probably will send a revised national health program to Congress this week. Compulsory prepaid insurance will still be its main feature, it was said.

This version may include provisions for Government subsidies for doctors in rural areas and for medical schools, the United Press reported.

While similar to the voluntary health insurance bill sponsored by Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), the Catholic groups' plan also would include a 10-million-dollar appropriation by Congress to help individual States to set up prepayment health programs, or use existing insurance plans.

Each State health agency would be authorized to provide health care for persons of low income or without income, by purchase of such voluntary health insurance as Blue Cross, Blue Shield and others, or by establishing its own insurance system.

The three organizations' oppo-

D. C. Girl, 12, 2 Virginians Die in Crash

A 12-year-old Washington girl and a Morrisville, Va., man and woman were killed last night in a headon collison on Route No. 1, near Fredericksburg, Va. Seven others, four from Washington, were injured.

The dead were identified as Jeanette Creech, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Creech, 1219 G st. se.; and Eugene Elwood Kemper, 24, and Mrs. Marjorie Coppage, both of Morrisville.

The injured included the father of the 12-year-old girl, two of his brothers, and one of the brother's four-year-old grandson.

3 Others Die of Injuries

Three other Greater Washington persons, including a University of Maryland coed, died during the day as result of earlier traffic accidents.

The Route No. 1 accident, police said, occurred about 10 miles north of Fredericksburg, as a car filled with eight persons, including the Washingtonians, was returning here from an Easter Sunday outing.

According to police, the car, driven by the father of the girl, collided with a southbound car, driven by Kemper. Police said the collision occurred when Kemper tried to pass another vehicle.

Police said bodies of the dead and injured were scattered for many yards along the highway, near the Austin Farms Restaurant about 2 miles north of Stafford Courthouse.

The critically injured were listed as: Creech, about 31 his

Speech on Bomb

Soviet Press Gives Cannon Big Spread

Moscow, April 17 (U.P.).—Every newspaper in the Soviet Union today printed without comment a Tass news agency dispatch from Washington reporting that Representative Cannon (D., Mo.) had called for an immediate atom bomb attack on Moscow in event of war.

The dispatches, headlined "Man-eater Cannon from the American Parliament," accused the chairman of the Appropriations Committee of making militant speeches in debate on the armed forces appropriation bill of 16 billion dollars.

"Other partisans of the bill frankly discussed it from the standpoint of war and clearly expressed the opinion that in event of war western European troops must be used as cannon fodder," the Soviet news agency dispatch said.

Tass quoted Cannon as saying that following conclusion of the Atlantic Pact all the United States needs is planes for delivery of atom bombs.

"We must strike Moscow and any other city in Russia in the first week after beginning of a future war," Tass quoted Cannon

Tass continued, "Without concealing the intention to use Europeans as cannon fodder for American imperialists, the Congressman said: 'In a future war we won't be obliged to send our land troops to Europe as was the case in the last war. We must equip the soldiers of other countries and let them send their youth to destruction instead of ourselves sending our youths.'"

DON'T bother us, Mr. Stalin—it's time to play ball again.

All of us crazy Americans are going to get a lot more excited today about what goes on behind the walls at Griffith Stadium here in Washington than what you're doing there behind your Iron Curtain.

That's the way it is and that's the way we want it.

In our Nation's Capital, our big man, Lefty Harry Truman, not to be confused with Lefty Harry Brecheen, is going to open the major league season officially by throwing out the first pitch for the game between the Washington Senators and the Philadelphia Athletics.

Brecheen is a left winger, southpaw to you, but you can't have him. He throws his curves strictly for the St. Louis Cardinals and he'll go into action with the rest of the major league teams on Tuesday against the Reds—that's right, the Reds—at Cincinnati.

Also today, Mr. Stalin, in historic old Boston, the pennant-defending Braves are going to try to take the flippant young Philadelphia Phillies for a ride on the 174th anniversary of Paul Revere's ride.

THERE IS likely to be a lot of valuable work hours lost in our big industrial plants in the next two days because team after team is predicting capacity opening day crowds—expecially if the weather is nice. Offhand, it looks as if about 313,000 workers are going to take the day off to see the nine opening programs today and Tuesday.

Silly, isn't it? Well, just the same we love it.

Give us that old lump in the throat, that queezy tingling in the spine when the band plays the "Star Spangled Banner" and Old Glory is hoisted to the topmost point of the park 'n center field. Give us that peanut vendor yelling, "Get 'em while they're hot, folks" and old Stan Musial slammin' one into the right-field seats with the bases full.

You take your old Iron Curtain; we'll take our new curtain-raiser.

Reds Persecute All Religions, Chapin Says

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Religious leaders in all Communist-dominated European countries are being systematically persecuted as "part of a carefully calculated campaign," Selden Chapin said yesterday.

The former United States Minister to Hungary, who was forced out by the Hungarian government, spoke on an Easter broadcast over the NBC network. He had been accused of being involved with Cardinal Mindszenty, a charge Chapin and the State Department bluntly denied.

"The drive against religious leaders in Hungary is not an isolated purge," Chapin said. "It's part of a carefully calculated campaign of religious persecution in all Communist-dominated countries.

"This general campaign isn't by any means confined to the Christian churches. It is directed against Jews and Moslems as well. Second, it isn't just an attack on the churches, but on all free institutions."

The real issue, Chapin declared, is not one of separating church and state but a conflict between "a new secular religion of the state and traditional religion of the Body of Missing Girl, 3, Is Found Near Ohio Home

Springfield, Ohio, April 17 (AP).—Sandy Robison, 3-year-old girl missing since Thursday, was found dead three-quarters of a mile from her home at 2:15 p. m. (EST) today.

The child's body was found by a searching party of volunteer firemen. They said there were no marks of violence.

Clark County Sheriff J. Arthur Shuman said he was searching for the girl's missing father, William Robison, 37, who had been absent about three weeks.

Sandy was last seen playing in the front yard of her home Thursday afternoon. She lived with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Foster. Her mother is in a hospital.

Decked out in hat and corsage, "Tuckey" drew attention Sunday. He is owned by Mrs. T. Raymond Zepp of 1150 Connecticut ave. nw.

Blazing Plane Crash-Lands

Four men, including a brigadier general of the Air National Guard, were shaken up when their B-26 medium bomber made a forced landing last night at National Airport after one of its two engines caught fire 1500 feet up.

Aboard the plane, which was en route from St. Louis, Mo., to Bolling Air Force Base, were the pilot, Brig. Gen. Winston Kratz, commanding general of the Air National Guard's Seventy-first Fighter Wing at St. Louis; the copilot, Lieut. Col. Charles DuBois; Crew Chief T/Sergt. Bernard J. Foshage of St. Louis, and Pfc. Donald A. Holliday, all of St. Louis. Holliday was hitchhiking aboard the plane to Fort Belvoir where he had been assigned.

21-Gun Salute in Dublin Hails Birth of Republic of Ireland

By John R. Higgins

Dublin (Monday), April 18 (U.P.).—Twenty-one guns mounted on historic O'Connell Bridge, heart of the Easter Week Rebellion 33 years ago, boomed out the birth of the Republic of Ireland at one minute after midnight today.

From all Dublin and the counties around, thousands of Irish massed in broad O'Connell st. to celebrate Ireland's complete independence of outside rule for the first time since the Norman King Henry II of England landed on the Irish coast in 1172.

The Irish Free State, with the status of dominion, came into being January 15, 1922. But not until the repeal of the External Relations Act in December, 1948, did Ireland cut her last tie with Britain.

Choice of Easter Monday for independence day and O'Connell Bridge to glorify it were tied up in the little State's colorful past.

A few blocks away stands the big gray Postoffice where, on Easter Monday in 1916, Padrig Pearse and his small band of volunteers from the illegal Irish Republican Army first proclaimed a republic and fought the British.

The siege lasted most of Easter week and, down the street, a second took place at the Customs House which also had been seized by the IRA.

Offer to Lift Siege Is Said To Provide For U. N. Rule

Envoy from Moscow On Way Here, Say German Dispatches In London Papers

London, Monday, April 18 (AP).—The Daily Mail said today a Soviet envoy is reported en route to Washington with a proposal for lifting the Berlin blockade if that city is "turned over completely to the United Nations."

In a Berlin dispatch the newspaper said the Russian suggestion is to turn Berlin over to the U. N. as a "neutral" city after "road and rail communications with western Europe have been restored."

Berlin dispatches to two other London papers carried similar stories but differing somewhat in detail.

General Malinin Envoy

The dispatches identified the envoy as Gen. Georgiev Malinin and described him variously as a former Soviet deputy chief of staff in Germany and onetime "senior member of the Soviet military administration."

(Gen. Georgiev Malinin was not listed in available reference sources in New York or London. On February 23, 1948, a Paris newspaper reported that Soviet Gen. Mikhail Malinin had made an unsuccessful proposal to U. S. Ambassador Robert Murphy in Berlin for a meeting between President Truman and Prime Minister Stalin in Stockholm.)

Report From Germans

The Daily Mail and the Daily Graphic, Conservative Party organs, said Malinin is understood to be on his way to Washington. The Laborite Daily Herald said he was reported chosen for the mission.

The Daily Mail said the report came from Germans and was not confirmed by British and American military sources. The Herald quoted "persistent reports."

The Graphic said "British and United States officials in Berlin are optimistic regarding the new Washington talks."

The Graphic said Malinin was the man who advised Russia to set up the blockade. The paper said he took part in the unsuccessful Berlin negotiations to end the tie-up.

Reds Said to Seek Way To End Berlin Blockade

Berlin, April 17 (U.P.).—Vladimir Dekanosov, former Soviet Ambassador to Germany, is in Berlin to seek a face-saving formula for lifting the Berlin blockade, German sources reported today.

The presence of Dekanosov, believed one of the top Russian experts on German affairs, was reported by the British-licensed German news agency CPD and the newspaper Die Welt. It was not confirmed by Russian sources.

Dekanosov was a former deputy foreign commissar under Maxim Litvinov and accompanied Foreign Commissar F. M. Molotov to Berlin for the 1940 Hitler-Stalin pact

Police Chief Slain In Harlan County; Cafe Owner Held

Shields, Ky., April 17 (AP).—Ambrose Metcalfe, Harlan County police chief, was shot to death on the street here today.

The officer, shot five times, died while being taken to the hospital at Harlan. Shields is five miles east of Evarts, which since August has had six police chiefs, one of whom was shot to death.

Arthur Jackson and Ford Sizemore were arrested and charged with the slaying.

The shooting took place in front of a cafe operated by Jackson, who recently was acquitted on a charge of illegal possession of whisky. Harlan County is legally dry.

Metcalfe had raided Jackson's place on several occasions, and it was as the result of a recent arrest that Jackson was brought to trial.

Jackson was acquitted after Sizemore testified he was the owner of the whisky seized in a raid. No action was taken against Sizemore.

Trumans Go To 2 Services For Easter

President Truman and his family attended Easter services twice yesterday.

The President, Mrs. Truman and Miss Margaret Truman first went to the 8 a. m. holy communion service at St. John's Episcopal Church, across Lafayette Square from the White House.

Mrs. Truman and Margaret, who are Episcopalians, took communion at the service, which was conducted by the Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, rector. There was no sermon or music at the brief service. Afterward Dr. Glenn introduced his 11-year-old son, Charles, to the President.

The Truman family walked back to Blair House, where they are living while the White House is being repaired. Then they were driven to the First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., for the 9:30 a. m. service.

Mrs. Truman wore a blue suit and fur piece, and Margaret's Easter outfit consisted of a long red coat and dark blue hat. The President was dressed in a gray suit and hat and wore no overcoat.

Mr. Truman is a Baptist and has often attended services at First church. It was filled to capacity, but many of the worshipers were unaware that the presidential family was present until after the benediction, when the pastor asked them to remain seated until the Trumans left.

The Trumans sat in a reserved pew eight rows back from the lily-banked altar. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, spoke on "The Resurrection and the Life."

Hope for Humanity

Christ is the only hope for humanity, Dr. Pruden declared. "One would think, he said, "that most of those attending this service are here because they recognize that in our troubled, confused, perilous world there is only one hope for humanity, and that is the Christ and the Christian Gospel.

"The terrible state of the world today is sufficient proof that men do not know how to live intelligently and constructively, and in the midst of all our confusion and anxiety, we hear Jesus saying 'I am the resurrection and the life.'

"He is not only our hope for life beyond the grave, but He is also our only source of life as it should be lived here and now. This needy world of ours will never be set right by men who pay their respects to God occasionally."

Flowers of every conceivable sort—and not a few inconceivable ones—bloomed yesterday on feminine heads, as Washington paraded its Easter finery about the city.

Roses, orchids, pussy willows and lilacs, smothered in ribbon and tulle, poured out of church on their proud owners' heads, to be paraded later before admirers on city sidewalks, particularly along Connecticut ave.

In mauve, violet, tourquoise and a dozen other shades, the artificial hat-blossoms outshone the natural blooms, vying for attention in parks and gardens, judging by watchers' comments.

Little plumage was visible at 5:50 a. m. when the day's low temperature of 35 degrees chattered the teeth of thousands attending sunrise services swathed in fur coats and blankets.

Mercury Rises to 59

Bright sunlight during most of the day and the mercury's steady rise to a 59-degree high at 3:40 p. m., brought out feminine costumes ranging from suits to swishing taffetas, topped by furs. Restrained pre-Easter buying was reflected in conservative styles which might have been last year's—or even the year before, when hems were still short enough for walking purposes.

The gentlemen put on a poor show generally, with not a single top hat or frock coat visible to this reporter in a four-hour survey of the church-dotted downtown area.

Hit of the fashion promenade on downtown Connecticut ave., however, was dapper 2-year-old George Radford Waldo, snappily dressed in miniature ensign's uniform and cap. The nautical youngster, son of Lieut. (j. g.) George A. Waldo, 2103 N. Scott st., Arlington, attarcted a host of lady admirers in his uniform made entirely by his mother.

Another Connecticut ave. attention getter was "Tuckey," a pedigreed Boston toy terrier, who sported a grey straw bonnet, purchased for $2 at a doll store by her owner, Mrs. T. Raymond Zepp, 1150 Connecticut ave. nw. Though most onlookers were amused, one man snorted:

"It's all right for people to do things like that to themselves, but I don't know why they have to pick on dogs."

Young "Cowboy" With Lasso

Among a number of children who showed a lack of Easter Parade spirit, was one 9-year-old cowboy in full regalia, seen lassoing bonneted young ladies as they emerged from a 16th st. church.

The pleasant afternoon lured thousands of residents and visitors to the city's parks, including 100,000 persons who swarmed over Hains Point for a look at the double cherry blossoms. Park Police reported eight extra men were assigned to handle the 32,000 cars that inched their way around the point.

The Washington Monument, Lincoln and Jefferson Memorials, as well as other sightseeing high-spots, also received a heavy quota of visitors.

Metropolitan police reported only one bad traffic tie-up yesterday, along downtown 14th st. from Maine ave. past K. st., when sightseers made their way home from 4 to 6 p. m. A dozen extra police, assigned to sightseeing routes along Constitution, Independence Pennsylvania, and Maine aves., otherwise managed to keep Sunday drivers on the move.

Rail and air terminals reported traffic brisk, in the later afternoon, but said they expected heaviest crowds in the evening hours.

congregation that Christ's resurrection is the central fact in history. Behind Easter is man's most haunting problem and from it comes the most wonderful answer—that He who raised Christ will also quicken man's mortal bodies, he said.

Place Cross of Lilies

Later a cross of lilies was placed on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in the name of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar, which sponsored the service.

More than 8000 persons attended masses at St. Matthew's Cathedral, 1727 Rhode Island ave. nw., during the Easter morning. The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Catholic Archbishop of Washington, officiated at a pontifical mass at the cathedral at 10 a. m.

The Washington Cathedral reported that about 4000 participated in services there. A public address system carried the service to persons sitting in two of the chapels in the cathedral and to those on the steps outside.

Speaking at the 7:30 a. m. service, the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, said: "I would be false to the Christ whose triumph we celebrate if I offered you on this Easter Day cheap grace, cheap joy, a cheap assurance of eternal life, an uncosting share in Christ's Easter victory over death.

"We are here to rejoice in a costly victory. There is offered to us an eternal life, a life with Christ," he continued. "But a price is marked upon it and that price calls for penitence and the sharing of the hunger and thirst and righteousness and the disciplines of discipleship," Bishop Dun said.

War veterans, hospital officials and civilians attended a 7 a. m. service in the Formal Gardens at Walter Reed Hospital.

"The ultimate triumph of the Risen Lord is coming. It must come if international order is to come out of international chaos, Maj. Gen. Luther D. Miller, Army Chief of Chaplains, told about 3200 worshipers at the service.

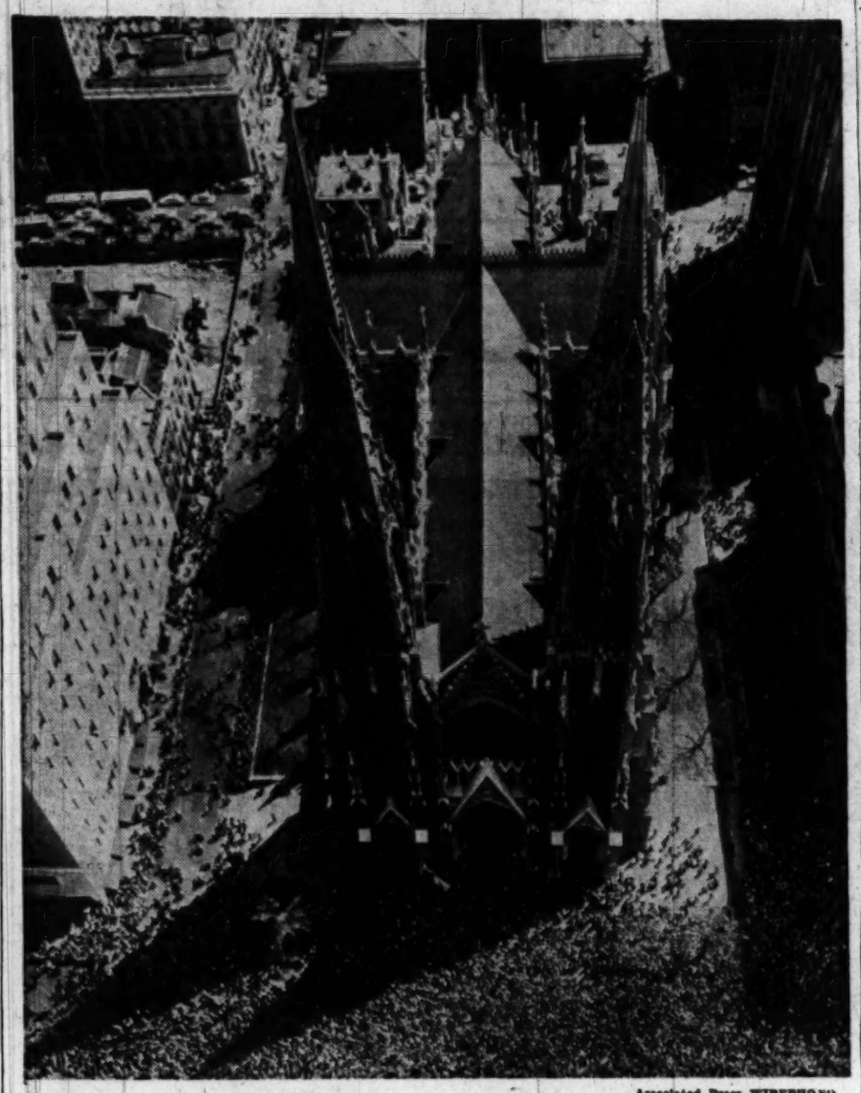
Easter Parade on Fifth Avenue...



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ONE OF GREATEST—This was the scene on Fifth avenue, in front of St. Patrick's Cathedral Sunday at the peak of one of the greatest Easter parades in New York City history. Record Easter Parade Crowd Jams New York's Fifth Ave.

New York, April 17 (AP).—The traditional Easter parade broke all records today—even though there were fewer eye-stopping outfits and celebrities on Fifth ave. than on previous Easters.

At St. Patrick's Cathedral the biggest crowd in history jammed the avenue and side streets in bright sunlight.

Not only was traffic stalled for blocks around the cathedral, but pedestrians frequently got stalled too. One woman fainted.

A police official estimated there were 1,500,000 people in the area.

But the paraders had to admire each others' Eastern finery. About the only celebrity they saw was former Postmaster General James J. Farley—with Jim, jr., Mrs. Farley and his daughter, the women both handsome in silver foxes and little white straw hats.

Most of the attention-getters were models. One Raquel Villamil, who said she was from Santiago, Chile, had eight balloons floating above her hat—until someone found a pin. And then there were seven.

Another sported spats to match her bustle. One stood in a short-sleeved dress in the nippy weather that had brought out furs and topcoats.

One man sported a white dinner jacket and a top hat—one of the few seen this year.

Many women put hats and flowers on their dogs.

A long parade of Model T's—one with two raccoon-coated, goggled occupants—shoved the Cadillacs off Park ave., where a smaller parade was in progress.

Society went to church practically unnoticed and in general quietly dressed.

Late in the show, pacifists, wearing antiwar placards as hats, were rushed by a visiting Marine and then hurried off the avenue by police. Two of the pacifists were booked for disorderly conduct but several came back again and joined the parade.

All Christian World Marks Resurrection

By The Associated Press

The Christian world celebrated the Resurrection yesterday and passed the lighter hours of Easter Day under generally sunny skies.

In Jerusalem, Franciscan monks and Russian nuns held Easter ceremonies on hillsides, Protestants attended services in the YMCA and the traditional mass was celebrated at the Holy Sepulchre. In Nazareth, Israel, thousands of Christian Arabs worshipped while others demonstrated under Communist flags.

Many Parisians left the city but thousands of tourists jammed Paris in perfect weather. Skies were bright over most of Europe except Portugal, where the crops needed rain anyway.

Most of the United States had good weather, but a Chicago forecaster who had predicted "cloudy and slightly warmer" looked out the window and saw rain falling, mixed with snow.

Biggest crowd reported for services in the United States was at Holy City, Okla., where an estimated 100,000 attended the midnight-to-sunrise celebration in the Wichita Mountains. More than 2000 persons were cast in the six-hour pageant, "The Prince of Peace."

Another pageant and musical program marked the annual sunrise service beneath the Cathedral Spires in the Garden of the Gods near Colorado Springs. Attendance was estimated at 20,000.

At the Park of the Red Rocks in Denver an overflow crowd of 15,000 persons heard Dr. Francis B. Sayre, United States representative to the United Nations.

Dr. Sayre said the spirit of Christ's teachings would return to Russia.

"We shall see strength fall away from a Stalin-dominated Russia, and the Russian people come back to take their rightful place in the world, cooperating for good," he declared.

West Europe Lines Reported Drawn

Chicago, April 17 (AP).—The Chicago Tribune said tonight that the preliminary resistance of western Europe against any onslaught by the Russian army will be based on the Yssel, the Rhine and the Po Rivers.

But North Africa will be the main defense bastion, the newspaper said.

The Tribune said "this was the decision made by the foreign ministers and American authorities in the secret parleys following the signing of the North Atlantic Pact in Washington when the Europeans submitted the list of weapons and equipment they desire from the United States under the proposed military lend-lease."

(The Yssel River runs east and west from Rotterdam through Holland joining with the Rhine at the Dutch-German border southwest of Arnheim. The Rhine runs generally north and south inside western Germany and between France and Germany, entering Switzerland at Basel. The Po cuts across the northern part of the "boot" of Italy.)

In a dispatch from Paris, the Tribune said the Iberian Peninsula (Spain and Portugal) will be organized as a continental defense base if the United States agrees to finance reconstruction of the Spanish highways, railways and ports to handle supplies and troop movements.

The newspaper said it had learned the outline of the "projected military operations" from members of the French mission who accompanied Foreign Minister Robert Schuman to the Washington conference.

The story said the conference "abandoned the theoretical line from Bremen, Germany, to Basel, Switzerland, following the course of the Weser and Rhine Rivers, as impossible to hold against armored divisions massed only a few miles eastward on the Elbe River.

"The new master plan provides for holding the Alpine redoubt of western Switzerland, then the Rhine River line from Basel north to Arnhem, Holland. The Netherlands Foreign Minister, Dirk Stikker, persuaded his colleagues to agree to hold the Yssel River line from there northward, thus attempting to protect Holland's principal cities, Amsterdam, Rotterdam and The Hague.

The Tribune dispatch said Schuman insisted that the plans provide protecting the Po River line in northern Italy but stipulated that the position must be held by non-Italian troops.

The dispatch also said the conference devoted most of its time to examining the problem of "a possible retreat from western Europe if the Russians succeed in achieving an overwhelming breakthrough on the Rhine."

It said American military opinion favored concentration on the Pyrenees line but that the Europeans objected to "Spain's antiquated railways, lack of port facilities in its harbors, and the wretched roads.

The Tribune story said bases in North Africa "would permit shuttle bombing of western Russia, with planes flying over the pole to Alaska."

Glamour or No

Army Doing All Right in Top Councils

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Lack of "glamour" may handicap the Army in getting appropriations from Congress, but it's doing all right in top defense councils, a survey shows.

Take a look at the key officials of the National Military Establishment—almost to a man they're Army or former Army. Commander in Chief Harry Truman, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and Undersecretary Steve Early all were World War I captains and now are Army Reserve colonels.

Below them, almost every military job of importance concerned with policy-making and coordination of effort between the Army, Navy and Air Force is held by a soldier.

First, of course, there is General Eisenhower, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and military advisor to the President and Defense Secretary. Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther is director of the joint staff, Lieut. Gen. John E. Hull heads the new and highly important Weapons Evaluation Group, which will pass on the merits of proposed weapons and whole systems of armaments.

Then there are:

Lieut. Gen. Leroy Lutes, staff director of the Munitions Board.

Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, just detailed to the new and important job of executive secretary to the Secretary of Defense.

Maj. Gen. Wilson G. Persons, Congressional liaison chief.

Brig. Gen. Charles T. Lanham, staff director of the Personnel Policy Board.

Of course, there are some civilians in high-level Office of Defense jobs and Air Force Gen. Joseph McNarney is in regular consultation with Secretary Johnson. He's only supposed to be here temporarily, however, from his command at Wright Field.

Complaints about the Army's glamorless state and its effect on money requests have been voiced with some justice in many recent speeches by Army leaders.

Army Secretary Kenneth Royall declared a week ago that he was "acutely conscious" of the Army's lack of "drama and glamour" compared to the Air Force and Navy. "We do not have the planes and ships and carriers which are eye-catching and impressive," he declared.

Gen. Omar Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, has spoken repeatedly along the same lines, and former Defense Secretary James Forrestal declared in his final report that for the Army "to function as an effective member of the national security team, there must be a clearer public understanding that land forces will continue to be indispensable."

Maybe that's one reason he picked so many soldiers as his key assistants.

DON'T SNEEZE—This is what last week's earthquake did to the chimney on C. D. Mansfield's home near Longview, Wash. The chimney was turned sideways and teetered there until Mansfield roped the top to a truck and pulled it off without damaging the house

Olympia, Wash., April 17 (U.P.)—The State of Washington was without a Capitol Building today after engineers told the State officials the building must be evacuated immediately because Wednesday's earthquake loosened the 100-ton dome top.

Engineers said the quake left the dome in a "very precarious position, from which it could topple at any time several hundred feet down to the main building below."

The dome is larger than that on the Capitol in Washington, D. C.

It was not known how long it would take to make the structure safe again.

Lack of Funds Imperils U. S. Radio in Berlin

By Wes Gallagher

Berlin, April 17 (AP).—Official sources said today that America is about to lose her only voice behind the Soviet iron curtain—the Berlin broadcasting station RIAS.

These sources regard RIAS as the most effective instrument for telling the Continent about the billions of dollars the United States is spending to aid Europe. Now, they say, the future of RIAS is threatened by a lack of funds.

Funds are lying idle in German banks but are tied up by United States Government agencies which say they cannot help, the informants said.

RIAS is the American Military Government's station in this Soviet-blockaded city. Unlike other American and British-controlled radio stations in Germany, RIAS was not turned over to the Germans.

Three Americans head the station's staff of 600 Germans. Heretofore funds for the station, amounting to an annual budget of $4,500,000, have been supplied jointly by the American Military Government and the Germans as a cost of the occupation.

Demand Surrender

Reds Issue New Chinese Ultimatum

Nanking, April 17 (U.P.)—The Chinese Communists today served a second ultimatum on the government demanding surrender by Wednesday.

The alternative would be a Communist onslaught on Nanking, Shanghai and other cities below the Yangtze River.

Nationalist leaders feared the Peiping peace talks were on the verge of collapse and that the long-expected Communist offensive across the Yangtze might start soon.

The Communist radio said the current peace negotiations would end Wednesday whether or not the Nanking delegation was willing to sign a peace agreement "dictated" by the Communists.

Government sources said the revised Communist surrender demands now contained the folowing four points at which the Government was balking:

1. A peaceful crossing of the Yangtze immediately after signing the peace agreement, opening all South China to easy Communist conquest.

2. Elimination of Chiang Kai-shek and the "four families" from Chinese politics.

3. Kuomintang representatives nominated to enter the Communist-dominated coalition government to be set up must first be approved by the Communists.

4. Minority party representatives in the coalition must be drawn from the so-called "democratic elements" inside Communist areas. This would automatically rule out minority parties in Kuomintang China, such as the Young China and the Democratic Socialist parties.

Diplomats Hope Nationalism Will Bar China Domination

By the United Press

American diplomatic officials believe the mounting tide of Asiatic nationalism will keep Russia from dominating China even if the Communists score a clean-cut victory in the Chinese civil war, informed sources said yesterday.

The belief that China will throw off all outside influences at the end of its current internal struggle is cited by these officials as one of the reasons for the Administration's "hands-off" policy toward China which has recently been under heavy congressional fire.

State Department officials are reluctant to discuss publicly the Chinese policy, which threatens to become an explosive domestic political issue. But they defend the policy privately, insisting that it is not weak, as some congressmen charge, but misunderstood.

Over the weekend, Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) aligned himself with congressional Republicans who have scored the Department for its stand against large-scale new United States aid to the tottering Chinese nationalist government.

McCarran accused Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson of giving the Senate "misleading" and "false" information on American aid to China.

His statement was prompted by a recent letter from Acheson to Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee opposing McCarran's help-China suggestions.

negotiations. Ten days later he was named Russian Ambassador to Germany.

Die Welt said his arrival coincided with strong efforts by the Soviet Zone German Economic Commission to obtain Russian military government approval of a plan to lift the blockade.

The formula reportedly advanced by the economic commission calls for all negotiations to be carried out by Germans, subject to subsequent approval by the Soviet military administration.

The German Economic Commission would make advances to the Bizonal Economic Commission in Frankfurt, seeking trade agreements. These proposals would include offers to lift "traffic restrictions" on interzonal trade on a reciprocal basis.

The economic commission based its appeal to the Soviet military administration on the fact that the counterblockade is breaking the back of the Soviet zone economy, Die Welt said.

Russian propagandists here completely ignored the airlift record of 12,340 tons of supplies flown into Berlin by Anglo-American planes yesterday. It was the top story in every Western-licensed paper this morning but the papers published east of Potsdamer Platz carried no mention of it.

State Silent on Report Soviet Wants Parley

By the United Press

The State Department declined to comment last night on a report by radio commentator Drew Pearson that Russia had requested a full-dress four-power conference on Germany.

Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said the Department stands by Secretary of State Acheson's statement of last week that the United States always is ready to listen to any Soviet peace offer in the East-West cold war.

Pearson said the Russian offer was made through its representative to the United Nations, and was considered so significant by Acheson that he discussed it with British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and France Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

He said the Russians indicated their willingness to discuss lifting the land blockade of Berlin along with the German currency problem, the new separate western German state and the possible withdrawal of both Russian and Allied troops from Germany.

Acheson Plea Expected for Years of Arms

By The Associated Press

Secretary of State Acheson is reported primed to tell Congress that we should be prepared to send American arms to western Europe for possibly "many years."

Acheson will emphasize, informed officials said yesterday, that any American military air program must be considered as a long-range project to insure accomplishment of the task of protecting American security.

Acheson and his top aides were reported unwilling to estimate at this time how long the program should run because of factors governed by uncertainties of the cold war.

Some officials reasoned that costs would taper off in a few years after modernization of western European armies had made headway.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill an undercover cloakroom dispute that some Senators said may develop into an open battle was developing over the arms program.

At issue is the question whether the Armed Services Committee or the Foreign Relations Committee should handle the legislation that will determine what arms, if any, will back up the 12-nation treaty against aggression.

This is the so-called "implementation" bill to carry out this country's program of arms aid to its allies under the treaty which is awaiting ratification.

U. S. Contracts Let in Alaska

By The Associated Press

The Army Engineers said yesterday virtually all contracts for the 55 million dollar military construction program on the Alaskan mainland have been let.

The program is designed to enlarge air bases and improve Army facilities, including housing and storage, and military installations unchanged since the wartime construction days.

Contracts totaling $15,249,540 for 13 projects have been approved recently, Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, chief of Engineers, announced. He added that, except for a few minor projects, this completes contract awards for the current Alaskan program.

sages poured into th government from leaders throughout the world, congratulating Ireland on her achievement after nearly eight centuries.

"I believe this historic event marks the opening of a new era for our people," Premier John A. Costello said at a press conference.

"The bitterness, the hatred and dissensions that have poisoned the stream of Irish life for so long will be eliminated."

The celebration was marred only by the opposition of former Premier Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail Party, which holds that there can be no republic as long as the partition of North and South Ireland continues.

Tribute Paid to Dead

Along the border which separates the 26 counties of the new republic from the 6 counties of the north, still tied to the British crown, IRA veterans in Newry marched quietly to the cemetery to pay tribute to those who died for freedom.

Police reinforcements, rushed to Newry in County Down by the North Ireland government, stood by, their hands idly in their belts, during the silent parade, but there were no disorders.

Ulster had banned all nationalist demonstrations in the north.

But in the south, the Irish green, white and orange colors flew from the fronts of pubs by special dispensation for the first time since 1836 when a law forbidding saloons to display flags was enacted.

De Valera, last surviving commandant of the 1916 rebellion, maintained that Ireland has been a republic ever since the 1937 constitution and there should be no public rejoicing until Ireland has been united and "faith has been kept in full with the signatories of the proclamation of Easter week."

churches based on moral and spiritual values." In fact, he explained, the Communist purpose is not to separate church and state but to absorb the churches into the state.

That done, Chapin said, the Communists propose "to use them for political purposes, to turn the churches into propaganda departments of the state—but at the same time to keep the outward forms of religious worship intact."

Land Reforms Hit Churches

With him on the broadcast was Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen and Richard Harkness, NBC Washington correspondent, who acted as moderator.

In answer to a question from Harkness, Chapin said the widely advertised land reforms in Hungary served as a means of striking at the churches, since most of their revenues came from the land they owned. No adequate compensation was made for the land seized by the State, he said, and the churches now have only the contributions of their usually poor congregations and "decreasing subsidies" from the State.

"There is one exception," he added, "and it's a revealing one. The clergy are no longer paid by the churches. They are paid by the government and are, in effect, civil servants of the State."

Celebrations Conflict

Both Chapin and Allen made the point that, while religious festivals and celebrations still are permitted, means are found to interfere with them without appearing to do so. For instance, said Allen, "Communist celebrations happen more and more to coincide with church holidays." Chapin added that on the traditional feast of St. Stephen the religious procession was unable to follow its usual route through the center of Budapest because "the avenues were reserved for a Communist parade."

Church holidays, Chapin said, are used increasingly by the Communist rulers to promote their propaganda and therefore have not been interfered with. These holidays are "useful occasions," he explained, adding:

"You'll understand when I tell you that last Christmas school children were given presents—in the name of the Christ Child, and Joseph Stalin. Stalin's picture hangs on the wall of the classroom. He is represented to the children as their father—the special protector of little children."

"Voice" Audience Called Large

Chapin and Allen agreed that the State Department's shortwave broadcast, the "Voice of America," reaches a great audience behind the Iron Curtain. Allen said he was told by a rfugee that to halt the broadcasts for even one day would deal a terrific blow to morale, that "they would feel. . . . they had been abandoned to totalitarianism."

Streets of Hungarian towns and vilages are "strangely deserted," Chapin said, and public conveyances "strangely empty" when the Voice is on the air. He said he was told that one entire village migrated nightly to another which had a radio set.

Moscow Called Liar By Yugoslavian Organ

Prague, Czechoslovakia, April 17 (U.P.)—Borba, organ of the Yugoslav Communist Party, today accused Russia of lying about how much grain she sent Yugoslavia in 1944.

Borba quoted Moscow Radio as claiming 500,000 tons of grain were sent to Yugoslavia that year.

Yugoslavia received only 50,000 tons and part of the "gift" was taken from German warehouses where looted Yugoslav grain was stored anyway, Borba said.

Dimitrov Ill, Kolarov Acting Bulgar Premier

Sofia, April 17 (AP).—The Bulgarian government announced tonight Vassil Kolarov, Vice Premier and Foreign Minister, will be acting Premier during the illness of Georgi Dimitrov.

The contral committee of the Communist Party said Thursday night Dimitrov had been granted a leave because of illness and is in the Soviet Union for medical treatment.

Balance of Goods and Money in 1948 Best Since Pearl Harbor, FDIC Chairman Says

By The Associated Press

Maple T. Harl, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said last night that the supply of money and goods reached a "better balance" in 1948 than at any time since Pearl Harbor.

Harl said this resulted from a decline in checking account deposits and circulating currency at the same time that record industrial and agricultural production was achieved.

The decline in checking accounts was the first since 1837, Harl said. He reported on the condition of the 13,419 FDIC-insured banks. The report noted that the United States has come through five years "without loss to any depositor of an insured bank—a new record for depositor safety."

The total amount held by businesses and individuals in checking accounts went down 2 billion dollars during 1948 to a total of 82 billion dollars at the start of this year.

The entire decline took place in the first half of 1948. Harl observed there also was a decline in the first half of 1947. In contrast to 1948, however, there was a last-half rise in 1947 more than offsetting the earlier drop.

A slowdown in loan expansion influenced the downtrend in deposits.

Three major types of loans—commercial-industrial, real estate and consumer loans—all showed a considerably lower rate of increase in 1948. Agricultural loans, however, jumped in volume due to increasing Government loans in support of falling farm prices.

Commercial and industrial loans, which totaled 19 billion dollars last December 31, rose only 4 per cent during 1948 against 29 per cent in 1947.

Real estate loans, aggregating 11 billion dollars at the year end, went up only 15 per cent in 1948 against 31 per cent in 1947. Consumer loans to individuals—credit for retail buying—amounted to seven billion dollars at the end of 1948 after increasing only 20 per cent in that year against 40 per cent the previous year.

Agricultural loans, however, increased more than 72 per cent in 1948, against 19 per cent in 1947.

One Man Off Job Isn't Strike, NLRB Decides in Building Case

By The Associated Press

When a union orders one solitary man to quit work, is it a strike? The National Labor Relations Board yesterday said "no."

It was the board's first ruling on that question under the Taft-Hartley Act. It came in a complex case involving two construction projects in Denver, Colo.

The board said unanimously that a strike is a "collective or group action" on the part of "employes" working for the same employer. It isn't action by a single workman.

Therefore the board found that the AFL Carpenters Union, Local 55, did not violate the secondary boycott ban of the Taft-Hartley Act when it ordered John Moller, a carpenter, off the job.

On the other hand, the board found in the same case that the secondary boycott provision was violated by these three union groups: AFL Electrical Workers, Local 68; AFL Plumbers, Local 3, and the Denver Building and Construction Trades Council.

The secondary boycott provision says a union can't attack a company by having the employes of other companies strike or refuse to handle the goods of the first company.

In this case, the "first company" was Gould & Preisner, a non-union electrical contracting firm in Denver. When the firm got the contracts for two building projects, the unions reacted against the construction companies doing the work. Gould & Preisner filed charges.

One unusual thing about this case was that when the NLRB general counsel's office applied for a temporary injunction against the union, as required by law in secondary boycott cases, Federal Judge J. Foster Symes refused to give it. He said the building projects were purely local, that they didn't affect interstate commerce and didn't come under the Federal Law at all.

But the board ignored Judge Symes' finding and ruled that Gould & Preisner is engaged in interstate comerce within the meaning of the act. In an earlier case the board had already established the precedent that it is not bound by Federal District Court decisions in questions of this kind.

Council to Run U. S. Proposed lined in the interests of democracy and efficiency.

He said the present system is "predisposed to inaction" and riddled with "the risk of complete or partial paralysis."

"Removal of any major defect," he said, "requires a reconstruction of the entire policy-making organization and the plan of representation on which it rests."

As an answer, he proposed a 21-man national council elected directly by the people. This body would pass bills which would in turn be sent to the Senate. However, the Senate would not be able to kill any measure. The most it would do would be delay council bills for 60 days while discussing them.

The council would be elected for a three-year term and would remain in continuous session. When regular members went on vacation or made inspection trips, their places would be taken by alternates.

Millspaugh said the national council, due to its limited size, would have to work through committees to keep from overburdening itself. He said that research and investigation could be handled by permanent commissions for permanent fields of policy and special groups for extraordinary problems.

The national council also would select a Chief Executive and could remove him from office at any time. The President would administer the executive agencies as he does at present but would answer directly to the national council.

Senate Units Meet Today

President's program still are lingering before the Congress:

1. Increased taxes. McCormack said Congress is awaiting final status of the budget after pending appropriations are completed.

2. Universal military training. This appears to be dead as a duck.

3. Repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and reenactment of the Wagner Act. Labor committees in both branches have reported out an Administration bill but the President's program is given little chance of enactment as is.

4. Expansion of the social security program. The House Ways and Means Committee has been conducting hearings on the Administration program, but there is no apparent pressure to enact it into law.

5. Civil Rights legislation. McCormack said it is held up to expedite other pressing legislation which can be cleared away without excessive debate. Attempts to enact it were stymied by a three-weeks filibuster in the Senate.

6. Prepaid health insurance. The President will send a special message on this this week.

7. Long-range housing. The Senate will renew debate on this issue today. The House has yet to take action.

Public Welfare Bill

8. A new Department of Public Welfare. A bill to create such a department to embody all Federal social security functions has been reported favorably by the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments but no further action has yet been taken.

9. Displaced persons. No floor action.

10. Federal aid to education. Two measures, one in the form of grants to help States defray school expenses, and one in the form of health aids to all children, have been reported to the Senate.

11. Development of river valley authorities along the lines of TVA. No action.

12. The Administration has presented its new farm program. Congress has not yet had time to consider it.

Prologue

Whan that the yonge sonne hath in the Ram his halwe cours y-ronne (and a little more besides) thanne longen folk to goon to balle-games. And just in case you have been too preoccupied to notice, we are happy to remind you that the American League baseball season will be opened, God willing, this afternoon at Griffith Stadium, and that the ceremonies will include a contest between Mr. Clark Griffith's problem children and the group of young prodigies said to have been assembled by Mr. Connie Mack of Philadelphia. They will have the occasion all to themselves, for the other clubs of the league have delayed their opening games until various times later in the week. In Boston, however, the National League champions, the Braves, will take on the Phillies today.

On the whole it promises to be a very successful season. In each major league there appear to be at least three or four clubs closely enough matched in prowess to assure pennant races that will evoke pleasurable palpitations. For our fellow townsmen, however, these affairs are likely to have merely academic interest. The state of mind prevalent hereabouts for some years has been well expressed by the poet who bids us look forward to the time when

Hope creates from its own wreck
The thing it contemplates.

There is nothing, as far as we know, in the rule book that expressly forbids Mr. Griffith's boys to create it this year; but if they should happen to do so, it will be to the shame and chagrin of almost every sports-page oracle between here and Cooperstown, N. Y.

Sometimes it seems to us that all the sighs and headshakings about the past and prospective performances of the Senators are a bit unreasonable. After all, baseball is a competitive game. It is not like the caucus race described in Alice in Wonderland in which everybody comes in first. The sad fact about a baseball game is that every time one side wins, another side loses. The philosophic attitude, then, would seem to be the one described by another eminent poet, who said what matters is not whether you win or lose but how you play. Or, as the pedagogues and psychiatrists and others are so fond of telling us, when you know you can't win, the thing to do is to lose gaily and gracefully. Some say that there is even more merit in losing gracefully than in winning. If this is so, our Senators deserve a great deal more of credit and praise than, we fear, they are likely to get.

ECA Guarantees

The objectionable features of the House foreign-aid bill guaranteeing American investors in ECA countries against losses from riots, revolutions, expropriation, and other disasters were deleted in conference. The bill, as passed, retains the provision for guaranteeing convertibility into dollars or other currencies of returns from sales of property up to the amount of the original investment. It also broadens the coverage to include convertibility of earnings or profits from the original investment but reduces the ceiling on guarantees from the 300 million dollars proposed by the House to 150 million.

Guarantees thus limited to currency convertibility cover a special type of risk that can be justified, since few participating countries are at present in a position to give firm guarantees of currency convertibility to prospective investors. The situation is quite different in respect to guarantees against losses from confiscation, riots and other acts. Countries benefiting from the use of American capital and wishing to attract it should be the ones to give assurance of fair treatment and provide compensation for losses due to domestic turmoil or legalized expropriation of private property. As The Post recently pointed out, one practicable method of insuring fair treatment and reasonable protection of American interests lies in the negotiation of financial treaties with countries in need of American capital.

If the United States were to assume risks of loss resulting from the irresponsible conduct of other nations, it would encourage rash ventures on the part of our own citizens. Moreover, it would establish a most unfortunate precedent leading to further demands for comprehensive guarantees against losses that are the normal result of investment activities, especially in new and undeveloped fields. Private investment ceases to be private when it is protected by the Government, at the expense of the taxpayers, against risks of loss. If private investors do not choose to assume the attendant risks of investing in foreign enterprises—and the risks are unquestionably formidable in many cases—they should keep their money at home and let the Government advance the needed capital, since it has to take the losses.

Medical Grants-In-Aid

Whatever may be the provisions of the compulsory health insurance measure that President Truman intends to submit to Congress this week, it will encounter formidable competition from the bill already introduced by Senators Taft, Smith and Donnell. The differences between the two approaches are basic. Mr. Truman, with the enthusiastic support of organized labor, would levy payroll taxes in an effort to give everyone assurance of medical and hospital care. The Republican trio, with the applause of the medical profession, would draw upon Federal funds to aid the States and local communities to meet their own health problems in their own way.

"We recognize the need for Federal participation in the realm of health," says the Taft-Smith-Donnell statement, "but we reject firmly the idea that the Federal Government should control all the funds spent, the detailed methods adopted, or the day-to-day administration of health activities in the States and localities." The primary responsibility for health, they say, rests upon the local community and the individual. The Federal Government has a secondary obligation to help finance health programs when the burden is too heavy for local agencies to carry. That obligation can be discharged through grants-in-aid without breaking down local institutions or cutting off experimentation with different methods and types of organization.

The Taft-Smith-Donnell bill would make funds available for health surveys to determine what additional facilities each community needs. It would authorize the appropriation of 150 million dollars a year (increasing to 300 million dollars by 1952) to match State funds for the extension of medical and hospital care to people now denied it. The matching would be on the basis of 33 1/3 per cent Federal funds in the case of the wealthier States, graduating up to 75 per cent in the case of States with the lowest per capita income. Grants totaling 35 million dollars a year would be given for medical and dental examination of school children. Hospital construction grants would be doubled in amount, with an improved matching formula. Federal aid to public health activities of the States, cities and counties would be extended in accord with the bill introduced by Senator Hill and nine other Senators, which is incorporated in the more comprehensive Taft-Smith-Donnell measure.

Another important title would set up a commission, including the Surgeon General and the Commissioner of Education, to study ways and means of training more doctors and nurses. The authors of this bill recognize, as many others who are interested in the health problem do not, that adequate medical care can be provided only by inducing more people to enter the health professions. As a stopgap, they would pay to accredited schools of medicine $500 per student ($750 for each additional student in excess of their previous enrollment) so as to relieve the distress of many medical training centers and encourage wider study of medicine. This title could be much improved while retaining the idea of a comprehensive study.

On the whole, the bill affords a sensible beginning to the solution of our health problem. It builds upon solid foundations already laid. It invokes the well tested principle of grants-in-aid, which is particularly well adapted to our Federal system. It avoids the blunder of trying to concentrate all responsibility for the health of the people in Washington. Mr. Truman may well remember in sending his bill to Congress that the choice is no longer between compulsory health insurance and nothing but between compulsory insurance and a grants-in-aid program that can serve to improve the national health as rapidly as our medical resources can be expanded.

New DP Law

Legislation to liberalize the Displaced Persons Act has moved as slowly as molasses in the Eighty-first Congress. The Senate Judiciary Committee has yet to hold formal hearings, and a House subcommittee has just now approved a modification of the Celler bill. But the delay will be forgotten if the Walter Subcommittee's version goes through undamaged. It may not be the "perfect" measure Mr. Celler would like. But it is in many ways an exceptionally admirable answer to the crying need for a liberal and workable DP law.

Regrettably, the Walter Subcommittee did not accept all the liberalizing provisions of the Celler bill. But in one noteworthy instance it jumped ahead of Mr. Celler, the DP Commission, and the President. This was in recommending, as we ourselves advocated, that the so-called "cut-off" date for DP eligibility be moved right up to January 1, 1949. The present law puts it at December 22, 1945, and the DP Commission suggested it be set at April 21, 1947.

This change, coupled with the specific prohibition against discrimination because of race, religion or country of origin, and elimination of the impossible occupational preferences, would remove the un-American discriminations from the present law. And the increase of the total number permitted admission from 205,000 to a possible 400,000 is, of course, the irreducible minimum for solution of the DP problem.

The effect of putting the cut-off date at December 22, 1945, was to deny entry eligibility to thousands of Jews who fled Poland in 1946 as a result of the Kielce pogroms. Moving it up to April 21, 1947, would eliminate this ugly piece of discrimination and open the door to about 2000 of the early Czech refugees from communism. Moving the date up to last January 1 would still further relieve the pressure of people fleeing from the Kremlin's kind of liberation.

In the past two years the flow of displaced persons has changed in complexion. Increasingly the refugees are political and religious dissenters from eastern Europe, including Russia, rather than racial outcasts. The largest number are Catholics, who at the end of 1948 numbered nearly 40 per cent of all in-camp DPs. There are also Protestant, Greek Orthodox as well as Jewish groups each numbering 13 to 17 per cent of the total in the camps. They are DPs because they are anti-Communist refugees from political and religious persecution. Certainly they should not be declared ineligible for asylumn here.

Valley-Type

President Truman has resolved several sets of dilemmas in his program for a Columbia Valley Administration. First, he has recognized the principle that in any undertaking so vast, and involving such tremendous expenditures of public funds, direction by the Federal Government must be paramount. Second, he has accepted the valley-type of authority, decentralized in the region, as the proper vehicle to administer the development.

Actually the President's proposal, encompassed in bills introduced in Congress last Thursday, is not so sweeping as it seems. What it does is to merge the separate and sometimes conflicting activities of the Army Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation and the Bonneville Power Administration in the Columbia Valley—something the Hoover Commission has recommended for the country as a whole. Certainly the elimination of divergencies and duplications between Federal agencies themselves is an important step forward. The President made the case for integration when he said:

> A great deal needs to be done to bring the land, forest and mineral activities of the Federal Government into step with the water development program. It is questionable economy to spend millions of dollars for dams as part of a flood control scheme, unless at the same time we are doing all we can in the way of forest and soil conservation and rehabilitation so that floods will be minimized rather than aggravated.

To insure that there will be no paralyzing conflicts with other Federal agencies dealing with natural resources, the Columbia Valley Administration would be vested with final responsibility for carrying out soil conservation, watershed protection and the like within the area. Cooperation of the other agencies would be sought in multiple-purpose, unified development plans. But if these bureaus should not concur, or if their funds should be insufficient, then the CVA could go ahead on its own. This seems to us a practical method of providing in the Columbia Valley the continuity of resource treatment that the country as a whole still lacks. It is an improvement over the situation in the Tennessee Valley, where the TVA and the Soil Conservation Service have been feuding.

In several other aspects the CVA proposal differs from the TVA, and the differences show a healthy adaptation to the particular needs of the Pacific Northwest. The CVA would be concerned with irrigation, applying the same principles in effect on reclamation lands elsewhere. Also, the scope of its power development activities would be far greater than TVA's. Existing power facilities in the Columbia Valley are greater than the total TVA development, and the goal is to increase these tenfold to a level of 30 million kilowatts.

On this score private power interests already have attacked the CVA plan with cries of "socialism." Actually, however, the principle of Federal power development is well established. Indeed, without the Bonneville dam, the Hanford (Wash.) atomic energy project would have been impossible. The plain fact is that there is a shortage of power in the Northwest. The CVA plan permits of distribution through private as well as public channels, and in reality more power in the area should prove a boon to the expansion of private enterprise.

Some further concessions to local representation might have been made in the CVA proposal without impairing ultimate Federal authority. The important thing, however, is to tie together the divergent programs now operating in the Columbia Valley, and in this the CVA project makes a good start. The optimum development of the natural resources of any area is properly the concern of all the people of the United States.

RIVER ROAD

I know a little shady road
That winds beside a river,
A moist and shining gravel road,
Half-hid by birch and willows;
It makes a wide and sandy bend
Where mottled shadows waver,
There children laugh and splash and shout,
Knee-deep in pebbly shallows.

The silver flight of dragonflies
Above the singing waters,
The greening air through sunlit leaves,
The wind through moving branches:
At night I shut my eyes to feel
That soft refreshing coolness,
I breathe the spice of bay and fern
And rest in pools of shadow.

"Under Consideration"

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Where Does The Money Go?

THOSE WHO WONDER why this richest country in the world is supposed to be unable to pay the bills for its own security, could do worse than visit the Capitol office of Representative Albert Thomas of the Eighth Texas District. Thomas is a fairly consistent congressional economizer, except when the Eighth District wants something. And this amiable weakness for pleasing his constituents has recently made him the hero of a meaningful little drama.

The opening scene occurred some time last spring, when this year's budget began to be prepared. An eager young official, ominously described by Thomas as "that young feller in the Budget Bureau who thinks he knows all about hospitals," looked into the Veterans Administration's gigantic hospital building program.

The program's goal was 152,000 hospital beds. But 136,000 beds would provide hospitalization for three times the total number of veterans seeking treatment for service-connected disabilities. Revising the goal downward to eliminate the 16,000 extra beds would effect an immediate global saving of 350 million dollars. Over 20 years it would also save the taxpayers an additional $2,200,000,000 in maintenance costs.

The young official caused these facts to be pointed out to Veterans Administrator Carl Gray and Dr. Paul Magnusson, the Veterans Administration's able medical chief. They agreed they could get along with only 136,000 beds in their hospitals. In the end, President Truman and the then Budget Director, James Webb, incorporated the economy in the budget that the President presented to the Eighty-first Congress.

UNFORTUNATELY, all these cloistered thinkers in the executive branch were forgetting several important points. Their economy plan meant not building 24 projected veterans' hospitals and diminishing the size of several others. Out in the districts, veterans' hospitals are favorite morsels of Federal pork, bringing profitable contentment to contractors, food purveyors, real estate dealers and other worthy citizens. And one of the eliminated hospitals was in Houston, the great city of the Eighth Texas District. Representative Thomas, official champion of the Eighth District, did not forget these points. He is chairman of the Independent Offices Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee. He swung into action.

Hearings were held. The needs of the group described by Representative Thomas as "the widders, the orphans and the war veterans" were recalled. Dr. Magnusson's testimony—that he really did not have any use for all those extra hospitals—was treated as a plaintive, inaudible murmur. The appropriation for the hospitals was restored to the budget. And for good measure, the tiresome old Budget Bureau had its appropriation reduced and its overly nosey staff rather sharply cut.

This was the triumph, it must be understood, of a man if anything above the congressional average, pleasant-mannered, far from doddering, reasonably industrious, and bred to politics almost from his boyhood in the East Texas town of Nacogdoches. If great issues have not often engaged his interest, it is perhaps because his time is so much taken by the endless running of errands for his people. And his people have appreciated his industry, for he has hardly been opposed in recent contests for re-election.

FURTHERMORE, the triumph of Representative Thomas is but one incident in a major governmental process. Many others might be cited, such as the disciplining of the State Department and Budget Bureau last year by the friends of the shipping lobby on the Senate Appropriations Committee. These Senators cried "economy" six days a week, and on the seventh grew furious because $500,000,000 in ECA funds had been saved by transferring useless American vessels to the French and Italians. This sacrificing of the general to the special interest is such accepted practice that it hardly any longer arouses indignation.

In the present instance, Houston may not get its hospital after all, despite Thomas' efforts. Appropriations are not mandatory, and the Representative talks darkly of executive tendencies to "usurp the constitutional prerogatives of Congress." All the same, the little drama presents a great issue. There is a question that must be answered by the districts with their titbits from the pork barrel; by the veterans, with their billions in annual appropriations; by the silver and other lobbies, with their swollen subsidies; and by all the others. It may be simply phrased:

"Do you, recipients of Federal bounty, benefit more by these special favors, than you would benefit by intelligent investment of the same sums in developing the whole wealth of this Nation at home, and assuring its entire security abroad?" If these Americans can see beyond their own noses, they can return only one answer.

Good Friday Holiday

I believe that this Nation, known throughout the entire world as a Christian Nation, should observe Good Friday as a national legal holiday.

I feel that the observance of Good Friday as a holiday would help to strengthen peace and good will throughout the world.

"Guilty Diploma"

The conviction of Baron Ernst von Weizsaecker by the Nuernberg court again raises a question that many have asked concerning the whole series of war crimes trials before the United States tribunal. This question has not dealt with the merit of the convictions, but rather with the legal foundation on which they have been based.

It is surprising to me that The Washington Post, which has persistently fought for the rights of individuals based on law, could have taken the position which it has in its April 14 edition on the Weizsaecker case.

There was, I believe, a great deal of truth when Senator Taft some time ago challenged the legality of the Nuernberg court. No international law exists which specifies that the crimes which the convicted Nazis had committed are in any way illegal. Men have been tried by victorious nations, according to arbitrary laws which these nations have set up.

Legally such "laws" are no more law than is wholesale revenge. There has been to a gratifying degree real justice in the manner in which the criminals have been tried. But the injustice and legal farce has been in the fact that neither those tried nor their countrymen have had any say in the establishment of the "law" according to which they have been tried. These are ex post facto laws in the meanest sense.

Whose task is it to define what is legal and what is illegal in the international realm? Is it the job of one or two nations which hold the balance of power?

Only formally established world law, based upon the consent of the people of the world, is sufficient to protect the sacred rights of all individuals. Anything less than that, though seemingly "right," is a mockery of the concept of law.

Closed Shop

Within one 48-hour period in January, one arm of the Federal Government, the Judiciary, declared that the States may outlaw the closed shop, whereas another, the Executive, called for the repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act to legalize the closed shop so far as the Federal Government is concerned.

The two most common objections are that the closed shop (1) represents a "monopoly" and (2) denies to nonunion workers "the right to work."

The only resemblance between the closed shop and a monopoly may be found in the fact that the supply of workers available to the employer is governed by the number of members of the union. But those periods have been extremely rare when the membership of a union has been inadequate to satisfy the manpower needs of an employer, and during such periods, as in the case of the recent war years, a number of unions waived the operation of their closed shop agreements.

Secondly, wage increases are not directly correlated with the level of union security. Unions most successful in obtaining wage increases are in industries that never had a closed shop—mining, railroads, automobiles and steel. There is no "right to work" in the sense of a right to employment.

At best, the sole supporting argument for anti-closed shop legislation is that it promotes so-called "free competition" among job seekers. But the primary aim of free competition is to provide the consumer with more goods or services at lower prices. Is it, then, the desire of legislatures to induce longer hours at lower wage rates? So long as the number of workers seeking employment exceeds the number of jobs available to them, the closed shop represents one safeguard of the interests of both the organized as well as the unorganized.

Congressional Librarian

Your editorial of April 10 on the anniversary of the Library of Congress was incorrect in one very important respect. Dr. Luther Evans is not a professional librarian. He has a Ph. D. degree in political science from Stanford University but has no professional degree in librarianship.

The editorial refers to Dr. Evans as an "eminent professional" but it is interesting to note that he was not even well enough known in the profession as a "self-made" librarian to rate inclusion in the second edition of Who's Who in Library Service, published in 1943.

Legalized Gambling

The legalization of gambling in the District of Columbia would be a sensible step. The money now spent to run down and prosecute gamblers could be used more advantageously for building more schools. Quite a bit of revenue would be derived from gambling if we were practical enough to legalize it. But society is bound to hypocrisy and is determined to make more instead of fewer criminals.

Carson's Appointment

President Truman is to be commended not only for his nomination of Steve Early to be Undersecretary of Defense, but for that of John Carson to be a Federal Trade Commissioner.

Carson's ability to get at the core of legislative and administrative news and his far-sightedness enabled the papers he represented to have outstanding Washington columns. Then when he became secretary to the late Senator James Couzens of Michigan, he seemed to have a decided effect on senatorial legislation.

But I believe that Mr. Carson has performed even better work in his job of the last few years—as director of research and information for the Cooperative League of the U. S. A. Here he and his associates seem to have brought the interests of farmer, worker and businessman together in a common effort.

Implementing Point IV

"Point IV" of the inaugural address of President Truman, which asks "a bold new program for making the benefits of our scientific advances and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of underdeveloped areas," is shortly to be implemented by a request to Congress for an initial appropriation of some 100 million dollars.

Almost all of this amount will be for technical services, engineering and scientific personnel, supplementing the existing services of the technical service division of ECA, which has already received over 200 requests to furnish technical service for existing and potential operations in ECA countries and their colonies.

Financing such a need is an insurmountable obstacle only if full and sole dependency is placed on Government financing with public funds and if American business is unwilling to assume the normal risks of venture capital in foreign trade

There exists in the United States a tremendous but undetermined quantity of excess or surplus industrial productive equipment.

A great deal of it is excess or surplus by reasons of: Technological advances in materials and processes; changing character of public demand; controlled by heirs or trustees whose only interest is in liquidation; medium and smaller plants with owners retired or desirous of retiring and no successors; changes in sources of raw materials (uneconomic location); error in gauging product demand; loss of foreign product markets during postwar development.

The export of this equipment would minimize capital requirements; in most instances, it would provide equipment more suitable to foreign labor capabilities than new. Its transfer would also provide, in certain instances, a potential source of new capital for domestic industry for the purchase of newer and more efficient machinery to replace.

Export by productive management rather than by machinery manufacturers themselves could provide a higher degree of more intelligent world market planning or management.

The nonuse or the uneconomic use of this equipment represents an extremely large charge on the national economy of the United States.

An organized effort (1) to develop a systematic listing of all such production equipment potentially available for sale, lease or transfer to foreign areas and (2) to explore foreign markets for desirable specific locations or customers would be a logical and natural step to implement the President's objectives.

It is believed this can best and more properly be accomplished as a function of private industry in full cooperation with the United States Government.

The organization formed to undertake this function must be of the highest integrity and character. The understandable reluctance of both American and foreign business principals to indicate a willingness to undertake even preliminary negotiations should be reduced to a minimum to assure confidence.

No standard pattern of these transactions can be predetermined. Each project will require separate and detailed consideration after all available facts and possibilities have been ascertained by qualified members of the organization.

The present is a most opportune time to explore the possibilities of exporting excess or surplus production equipment abroad to establish new facilities or to expand existing facilities there in the cause of improved living standards throughout the world and stabilization of the American economy.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Budget Of The Cold War

RECENTLY at a meeting in the Pentagon, Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, the President's principal economic adviser, made a speech off the record. It was released for publication about 10 days ago. Dr. Nourse had said that it would be unwise on economic grounds to treat the North Atlantic Pact as a reason for adding to the total of our expenditures for military security. And then he added that unless the pact has "increased our national danger," it ought not to be necessary to vote "additional outlays" over and above the 15 billions for military defense.

LIPPMANN

At the White House press conference, which took place the day Dr. Nourse's remarks were published, the President said that Dr. Nourse was entitled to speak as an economist but not as a maker of policy. The policy of the Administration was to ask Congress to vote additional funds —presumably upward of another billion dollars—to arm our allies in the Atlantic Pact.

Four days later Mr. Hoover came along with the report made by Mr. Eberstadt which says that the military budget is padded, that there is in it a "staggering waste" which may be as high as 1½ billions (just about the amount necessary to begin rearming western Europe), and that "Congress allocates billions without accurate knowledge as to why they are necessary and what they are being used for."

Two days after that the House of Representatives passed a military appropriations bill, which only a handful of the members can even pretend to understand at all. The hearings were perfunctory, and the debate was negligible. This bill asks the Administration to spend more money than it asked for.

THUS THE President by saying that he wants additional funds to arm Europe, and the House by voting additional funds to arm the United States, have combined to give the people and the world the impression that the military outlook has not been improved by the pact, and that it may be worse. That cannot be what Mr. Truman and Mr. Acheson think. But that is what the American people and the rest of the world will think if the ratification of the pact is followed by demands for an increase, and not for a stabilization, of the total expenditures of the United States for foreign aid and military purposes.

It will be very hard indeed to convince a great many people in Congress and out of it that Dr. Nourse is not right—right not only as an economist but right also on the meaning of the pact. For when the American guaranty against aggression has been ratified by the Senate, the only convincing way to prove that it promotes security and that it is in truth defensive, is to put a ceiling on our total expenditures —to appropriate no more for the cold war after the pact than we were spending before there was a pact.

THE PACT should be the occasion for rearranging our expenditures within a fixed total. To be sure, in the vast amounts we are spending another billion more or less will have no noticeable effect on the American economy. But as a matter of principle it makes a very great difference whether the budget of the cold war is larger, is smaller, or is stabilized, after the pact is ratified.

If it is larger, nothing that Mr. Acheson can say by way of explanation will dispel the impression that the pact has inaugurated a more feverish race of armaments because it has not redressed the balance of power between the Soviet Union and the Atlantic Community. But in fact the formal commitment by the United States to treat aggression as war against the United States has redressed the balance of power. Another billion or so will not redress it more surely. It will only indicate that we lack confidence in the effectiveness of the pact.

CONGRESS need have no fear that it is being isolationist or that it is defaulting on American security if it tells the Administration to finance the arming of western Europe out of the American military budget and the ECA funds. No one can possibly prove, or believe seriously, that out of this total of about 20 billions, the Administration cannot find one billion for arms to Europe just by allocating the money more efficiently. It cannot be true that security, recovery, peace hang on whether the total amount is one billion more or less.

But it is true that if the total has to be increased at all after the pact is ratified, then the outlook is so dangerous that it ought to be increased by all the billions that we should spend if full scale war were imminent. Unless the pact can be the occasion for a decision that we are at the limit of the military expenditures for the cold war, then we are on the verge of a shooting war and there should be no limit at all on the expenditures.

NOW, no responsible and informed man thinks we are on the verge of a shooting war. Certainly Mr. Truman does not believe it, or he would not be asking for a paltry 15 billions. He would be asking for the 90 billions that we spent in 1944. But he will give the people here and abroad the impression that he believes it if he sets up a quarrel with Congress over whether there shall be the additional expenditure. And that impression will do nothing but harm—feeding all the suspicions of the Russians and all the deep anxieties of our people here and of our doubting friends abroad.

Yet in fact the only reason he is asking for the additional funds is that it is too much trouble to straighten out the confusion in the Pentagon, and to deal firmly with the tendency of ECA to oversell itself. So Congress should help him to help himself by fixing a grand total for the cold war, preferably a little lower than the current expenditures, in any event no higher.

A Communication

Senatorial Fiddling As Business Burns

ANY gallery observer of the Senate in action during this Eighty-first Congress can answer the question posed recently by Herblock, "What goes on in there, anyhow?" What goes on in there is mostly talk, much of it irrelevant to the business at hand.

During the debate on the amendment to the cloture rule, which lasted 16 days, 15 extended speeches were made on extraneous matters. With carefree nonchalance Senators discussed the North Atlantic Pact, Government publications, and what not. At the end Senator Capehart remarked in disgust: "It is simply impossible to do anything in the United States Senate except talk." As a forlorn hope he announced the formation of the "Capehart Club of silent members."

ALTHOUGH the Senate is often referred to as "the most august deliberative body in the world," it seldom deliberates.

"All of us know," remarked Senator Lucas during the debate on the ECA bill, "that in the afternoon very often there are not a dozen Senators on the floor of the Senate listening to the discussion . . . for when they know how they will vote on amendments, they will not sit in the Senate chamber all afternoon and listen to the discussion, but will be working in committees, where they should be."

The truth of this was seen in the overwhelming rejection of most of the ECA amendments and in the final passage of the bill, after 14 days of random talk, by a vote of 70 to 7.

Much debate in the Senate could be dispensed with. It does not change any votes, for as one of the Senators said frankly, "No conversions are made after the first 15 minutes."

"The talk is either dilatory in purpose or intended to let the folks back home know that the Senators are on the job in Washington and are not sojourning in Florida or attending the races at Bowie. That is why they want a quorum call at least once a day —to let their constituents know they are here at work.

This is an amusing conceit, for few people care any more what goes on in the Senate and fewer still bother to notice whether or not their Senators are present. What the people are interested in about the Senate is the end product of its work, i. e., its legislative output. Thus far in the Eighty-first Congress the end-product of this "immovable body" has been almost nil.

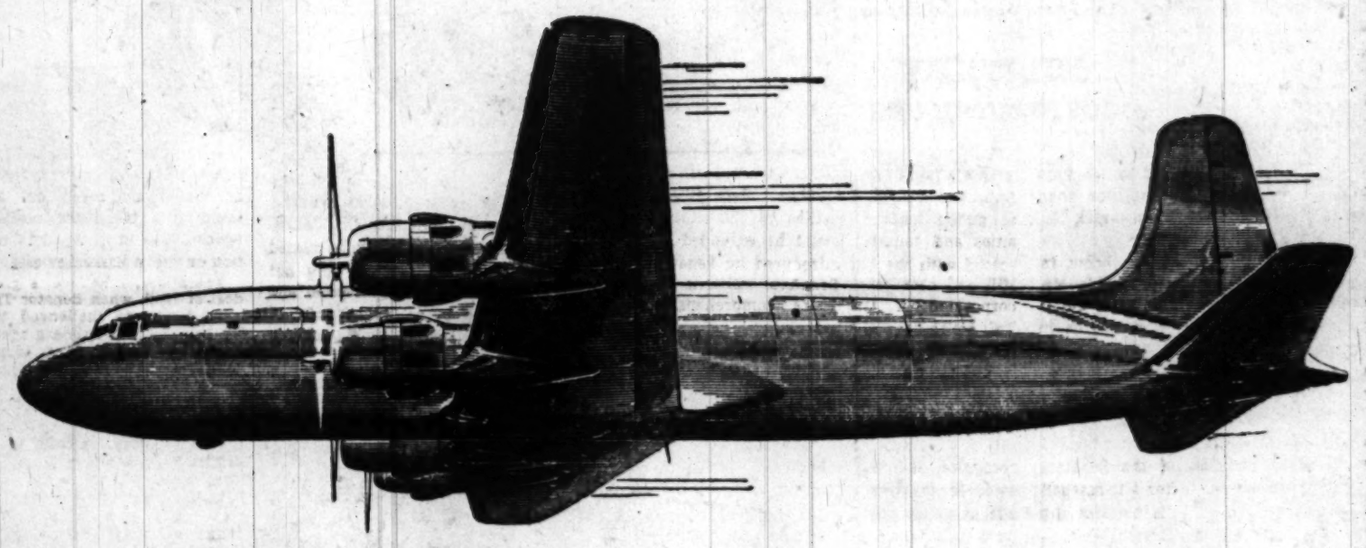
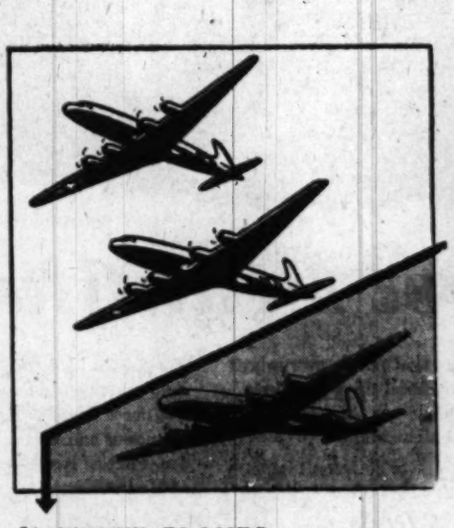
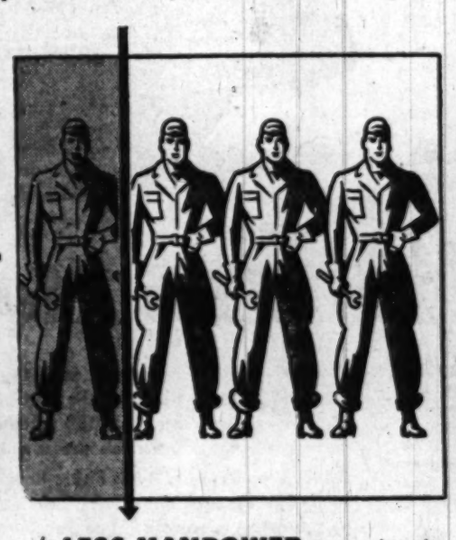
Preparing for tomorrow's miracle!



SOUND PLANNING by Douglas more than ten years ago in the design and creation of the C-54 helped make possible today's miracle of transportation—the Berlin Air Lift. To meet the needs of tomorrow's miracles, Douglas is now building the giant versatile DC-6A. This all-weather, all-purpose, 300 mph Douglas cargo transport will be ready soon—whatever the job, wherever the mission.



⅓ FEWER PLANES of the Douglas DC-6A type will carry 4,500 tons of cargo which now require 670 trips into Berlin. Flying a 30,000 pound load at far greater speed, the DC-6A would thus save 4,800 trips per month on the Air Lift run, with resultant savings in money, men and planes.



¼ LESS MANPOWER to maintain DC-6A fleets. Only 3,600 maintenance men will serve the DC-6A in contrast to the 4,674 now handling Air Lift planes each month. Two-end loading doors and single-compartment interior also make for swift, easy loading—further cut manpower needs.

⅓ LESS OPERATING COST and economical original cost of the Douglas DC-6A will mean substantial future savings. This becomes vastly important when it is realized that the first 7 months of the Berlin Air Lift have cost us over $100,000,000 in operating costs alone.

Finding of Cancer Virus Is Reported

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Cancer scientists have isolated and identified a breast cancer virus in mice, it was announced yesterday.

The laboratory feat, an important step in the many-sided fight against cancer, was disclosed by a group of medical scientists from Columbia University.

Their report, prepared for delivery at the fortieth annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research, at Detroit, is scheduled to be presented today by Dr. Samuel Graff, associate professor of biochemistry at Columbia's College of Physicians and Surgeons. It confirmed the group's earlier report, of May, 1947, which revealed "substantial hope" the suspect virus would be isolated.

Like Human Cancer

Breast cancer in mice, the researchers said, closely resembles human breast cancer, which is the most common form of the disease, and which attacks about one in every 25 women.

The cancer virus was isolated from the actual milk of the mice, virtually all of which developed breast cancer later in life. And when injected into a family of mice normally not susceptible to breast cancer it caused the disease to appear, Dr. Graff said. Nor are males of the family immune, he added.

The virus not only has been taken from the milk of cancer-infected mice but also, from the milk of low-cancer strain mice in which the disease had been induced by foster nursing. Thus, it was shown that the virus is transmitted from the mother to the offspring through the milk. It could not be found in milk of non-cancerous mice.

Developed Disease

The Columbia investigating team discovered that when a line of mice in which the breast cancer incidence was only 1 per cent were foster nursed to a high cancer strain of mice they developed the disease in 76 per cent of cases.

Potency of the virus indicated by the fact that injections as small as eight thousandth of a gamma produced cancer. A gamma is one thousandth of a milligram—an almost indescribably minute part of a drop. The disease was produced either by mouth feeding or by injection, the investigators reported.

Related Findings

Related findins of the research team included:

1. That though the virus is taken into the animal's body at a very early age it does not form a tumor until relatively late in the lifespan of the mouse.

2. That the virus must normally be introduced in the infant mouse, since if the animal is more than two weeks old at the time of inoculation the disease incidence is greatly reduced.

It has not yet been proved that there is a milk factor in human breast cancer, researchers emphasized. Nor has the mouse cancer virus work extended to a point of attack against the virus, they said.

Further research into the immunological phase for diagnostic measures and possible treatment are now getting underway, Dr. Graff said. These studies are being made by Dr. Michael Heidelberger, professor in immunochemistry at Columbia.

Scientific Controversy

Whether or not cancers are caused by viruses has caused long-standing controversy in medical fields. A recent report from the British Medical Association of success in transmitting cancer tumors through dried tissues was hailed as proof of a cancer virus. The announcement was received in the United States with a mixed reaction, with many cancer specialists pointing out that viruses form only a fraction of cancer causes, if at all.

In 1936, Dr. John J. Bittner, of Jackson Memorial Hospital, Bar Harbor, Me., discovered that a causative agent was present in the mother's milk in some mice. At that time, he said further progress in the study was dependent upon isolation and characterization of the agent, the feat now announced by the Columbia team.

Painstaking Tests

The Columbia investigators painstakingly narrowed the field of milk factors by spinning out the milk, and finding it free of the causative agent; then testing the proteins, and finding that they, too, were incapable of producing cancers. This left only a minute fraction of the milk to study, and it was in this fraction, they said, they found the cancer virus.

Isolation of the actual virus was accomplished through a long, involved process with modern medical research equipment such as the electron microscope, the ultracentrifuge and electrophoresis apparatus, plus the most up-to-date knowledge in enzyme chemistry. The feat was accomplished, the virus was viewed under the electron microscope, and the virus has been photographed, announcement stated.

Dr. Graff's coworkers in the 12-year project included Dr. Dan H. Moore, biophysicist; Dr. Henry T. Randall, surgeon, and Dr. Cushman D. Haagensen, associate professor of clinical surgery, all of Columbia, and Dr. Wendell M. Stanley, formerly of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, who shared a Nobel prize two years ago for his work in isolation of viruses.

The unique "mouse dairy" which played such a vital role in the isolation of breast cancer virus in mice is located high in the towering building which houses the College of Physicians and Surgeons at the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York City.

More than 10,000 mice were used in the long series of tests, it was reported. Thousands of mice are still milked regularly, at a cost of $10,000 a quart, the researchers said.

Tediously milked with the aid of a specially designed miniature suction pump, the mice were made to give milk only once during pregnancy. Each mouse yielded only one cubic centimeter of milk and the total annual collection was two quarts, the laboratory statistics revealed.

Technicians who man the "mouse dairy" said the animals live better than most humans. "They have to," it was explained, "because any early disease would destroy the experiment, breast cancer usually being a disease of adult life . . ."

Wartime Babies Hike School Enrollment

The wartime baby boom helped sweep the Nation's school enrollment past 28 million, highest in history at the start of the present school year.

The Census Bureau reported last night this represented a gain of 600,000 over the previous year and about one million over prewar 1940.

sition to the compulsory Government insurance is based on the fear that it would involve a loss of freedom for voluntary health agencies, and put an end to private initiative to the ultimate detriment of the health of the Nation." This was expressed in a foreword by Bishop Karl J. Alter of Toledo.

Other recommendations are:

Establishment of a division of health in the Federal Security Administration; grants in aid for medical, dental, nurses' and practical nurses' schools; more Federal aid for construction of hospitals, and for community health centers in rural areas with special needs.

Also, extension of Social Security benefits to include sickness disability in the same category as unemployment.

Health coverage provided by a State agency should include hospital, medical and surgical service, according to the proposal. Fixed fee schedules should be established within each hospital.

Finch Considered For Commissioner

Wilbur S. Finch, president of the Central Suffrage Conference and a long-time battler for local home rule, is being considered for District Commissioner, The Washington Post learned yesterday.

Finch

A fourth generation Washingtonian, Finch has never been able to cast a ballot and has no political party affiliation. At 52, he heads the Washington office of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Finch's name came up when it was learned from officials in Democratic circles that the race for Commissioner is wide open. The term of John Russell Young, a Republican, expires May 17.

But, as reported in The Washington Post Friday, Young will not be reappointed if the right man can be found for the job, these Democratic circles declare.

The search for a new Commissioner is a search for a highly competent man—or woman—to take the important post.

Finch has been active in the local suffrage movement for some 15 years. Before heading the Central Suffrage Conference, he served two terms—1944 to 1946—as president of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The central suffrage group is composed of representatives of virtually all District organizations working for local home rule.

The Washington Post was told that the search for a new Commissioner was not being limited to Democrats, that a truly "voteless Washingtonian" might very well be the man.

'Greenback' Corsages Aid DAR

The Washington Post

STARTER—Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, pins a corsage made of dollar bills on Mrs. V. Eugene Holcombe, national chairman of the DAR building fund promotion committee. Mrs. O'Byrne had suggested that delegates to the DAR Congress opening here today wear "greenback" corsages and turn them over to the building fund after the convention

G. Trau of Sherman. Mrs. Rowland, incidentally, is one of the candidates in the election of vice presidents general slated for Thursday morning.

The room includes an antique piano, violin, harp and organ from the period 1780-1820.

Accepted by Mrs. O'Byrne

Mrs. O'Byrne accepted the room on behalf of the national society at the dedication ceremonies in the national board room of the hall. Mrs. Maurice Clark Turner, national chairman of the Correct Use of the Flag Committee, led the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, and Mrs. Stephen A. Penix sang the national anthem.

Mrs. Edwin Stanton Lammers, recording secretary general, and Mrs. Roy J. Frierson, curator general, spoke briefly in praise of the Texas project. Mrs. Robert Keene Arnold, chaplain general, read the dedication prayer.

Later in the evening, Mrs. O'Byrne urged the junior membership committee of the DAR to concentrate its support on DAR-approved social and welfare work instead of the "outside" organizations some groups had contributed to during the past year.

Rminds Them of 35 Projects

Speaking before the committee's annual buffet supper and meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, the president general praised the young Daughters for their welfare work but pointed out that they should donate their contributions to one of 35 projects of the society. "Let's have all DAR money going to the DAR projects," she said.

She offered her recommendation after the committee's national vice chairmen had reported that several of the junior groups last year gave to local hospitals, boys' clubs and other organizations not on the DAR program.

Mrs. O'Byrne then listed some of the DAR social work that would most interest the young committee members (all of them between 18 and 35 years of age). She suggested that they organize more Junior American Citizen's Clubs and Children of the American Revolution societies, and work for approved schools.

Another special guest at the meeting was Helen Pouch, honorary national vice chairman, for whom the committee's main scholarship fund is named.

Reports $3879.39 Collected

Miss Mary Helen North of Indianapolis, Ind., national chairman, reported that $3879.39 was contributed to the Helen Pouch fund during the past year and then set next year's goal at $5000. She also disclosed that the committee had awarded 30 scholarships to DAR-approved schools and had donated $900 to the health program at Kate Duncan Smith School in Gunner Mountain, Ala.

Vice chairmen who reported were Mrs. George U. Baylies, Northern division; Mrs. James I. Pritchett 3d, Eastern Division; Mrs. S. T. Pilkinton, jr., Southeastern Division; Mrs. George T. Spears, jr., Southwestern Division; Mrs. James W. Reid, Central Division; Mrs. Roger L. Williams, Western Division, and Mrs. Harry G. Melvin, Pacific Division.

Will Operate Bazaar

During the regular sessions of the convention this week, the Junior Committee will operate a bazaar in the lounge at Constitution Hall. There delegates may buy DAR note paper, stationery and trinkets brought from all sections of the country. Proceeds will go to the DAR building fund and Helen Pouch Scholarship fund.

Meanwhile, several of the State Societies of the DAR held suppers and dinners. Among them were the Illinois group's buffet supper at the Carlton Hotel, the Massachusetts dinner in the East Room at the Mayflower Hotel, and the Minnesota dinner in the Pan American Room of the Mayflower.

Business sessions for Tuesday afternoon have been cancelled to allow more social meetings of the State Societies and other affiliated groups.

'Great Gains' by Minority Groups Reported

New York, April 17 (AP).—State and local government action, plus advances in community relations in 1948, led to "great gains" for minority groups, B'nai B'rith's Anti-Defamation League said today.

But the Jewish service group added in its annual report, "It is in the areas of education, employment, fraternal organizations, housing and interpersonal relationships that discrimination against Jews is most extensive, and increasingly so."

The survey is slated for publication this week as a 215-page book by Ruth G. Weintraub, Hunter College associate professor.

The report said, "The South is changing fast—faster than many of its political leaders care to admit." It added that an estimated 700,000 Southern Negroes voted in the 1948 presidential election as against 200,000 in 1944.

The survey said 86 per cent of the application forms of "non-denominational colleges — public and private" still carried racial and religious questions, a year after the President's Commission on Higher Education urged their deletion.

Trick devices such as "using mortgages and financing companies in order to achieve segregation indirectly" are used to circumvent the 1948 United States Supreme Court decision which held neither State or Federal courts may enforce restrictive real estate convenants, the report charged.

Indonesians Seek Loan

Manila, April 17 (AP).—The Indonesian Republic has applied for a million-peso ($500,000) loan from the Philippines, the Philippines Foreign Office disclosed today.

Four Escape Serious Injury in Plane Accident . . .

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

NEAR TRAGEDY—An Air National Guard B-26 medium bomber hugs the earth under a blanket of fire-extinguishing foam after it crash-landed at National Airport here last night. The landing was forced when the right engine caught fire at an altitude of 1500 feet. The pilot, Brig. Gen. Winston Kratz, and three others escaped serious injury. Airport Firemen Charles E. Jones, of Alexandria, and Bernard D. Spicer, of Upper Marlboro are shown at the scene

Blazing Plane Crash Lands

Foshage noticed the right engine afire, an airforce spokesman said.

General Kratz decided to make a forced landing at the nearest field—National Airport. The plane landed on its belly, its landing gear having been drawn up deliberately for the forced attempt.

According to two eyewitnesses, Stanley Tull and his brother, Leslie, of 204 Q st. nw., who were in a parked car watching the planes, the National Guard craft almost struck a rising Constellation. They said the bomber hit the runway and slid 450 feet on its belly.

Taken to Bolling Hospital

All aboard the bomber, though not injured, were removed to the station hospital at Bolling for a check-up, an Air Force spokesman said.

General Kratz was coming to Washington for a 12-day tour of duty with the Air Advisory Board of the Air National Guard.

U. S. Will Rent Farmers' Space For Surplus Corn

By the United Press

Farmers will be asked to rent space to the Government to store surplus corn taken over under the multi-million-dollar farm price support program, Agriculture Department officials said yesterday.

They said complete details on the program—including how much rent the Government will pay for farmers' bins—will be announced soon, perhaps later this week.

Farmers also may be asked to store some Government wheat. That probably would be only a temporary program, however, since any wheat taken over under the support program would be used to meet this year's export quotas.

Man Kills 4, Slain by Posse In Gun Battle

Pullman, Wash., April 17 (AP).—A businessman wanted for assault killed three police officers and a taxi driver and was shot dead himself today in a wild Easter Sunday gun battle.

Police Chief Arthur Ricketts said George McIntyre, 31, an electrical store owner, went berserk when Policeman Ross Claar attempted to arrest him.

Claar was killed in the first hail of bullets and three members of a sheriff's posse were shot dead later. Two men were wounded by gunfire. Another had been wounded by a knife in a fight with McIntyre earlier.

Other dead were identified as: Sheriff L. M. Parnell, Deputy Sheriff Gilbert Gallagher and Ernie Buck, taxicab operator and a member of the posse.

Ricketts gave this version of the events leading up to the gun battle:

Claar was assigned to arrest McIntyre as a result of a fight between McIntyre and W. H. Kershaw at the dairy where Kershaw worked.

Claar apprehended McIntyre at a service station on the main street of this placid college town. Claar attempted to make the arrest but McIntyre refused to go with him. Claar went back to his police car and got his nightstick.

McIntyre shot Claar three times, then struck him over the head twice with the nightstick. Then he took Claar's gun and the nightstick and fled toward his home.

A posse was organized and went after McIntyre.

The crazed gunman opened fire as the officers and others approached.

Parnell was driving down the highway when a bullet went through his windshield. He stepped outside the car into the line of fire and was killed.

Gallagher also was killed at his car before he could start closing in on McIntyre. Buck was killed as the posse exchanged shots with McIntyre.

When the shooting ended, McIntyre's body was found in a gully near his home.

McIntyre had been convicted of resisting arrest on a previous occasion. The arresting officer then was Claar.

Oil, Gas Explorers Active in Virginia

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Blacksburg, Va., April 17.—Southwestern Virginia is experiencing a wave of exploration for oil and natural gas that at present isn't equalled in any other section of the country. Some success has been reported, particularly in the search for gas.

Taking part are some of the big names in the fuel and oil business. In other places, the so-called small wildcatter is sinking his shafts wherever a dome indicates there may be oil, and the Appalachian Mountains down this way have a lot of domes.

Right outside Blacksburg, the California Co. is conducting one of the State's most interesting ventures.

Sinking Deep Well

This company, reputedly a wholly owned "independent subsidiary" of the Standard Oil Co. of California, is sinking a deep well to test out the widely held theories of local geologists that there is oil in large supply deep in the earth. Dr. Byron Nelson Cooper of VPI here is one of these geologists and served as an adviser to the California outfit.

The well is on Prices mountain, between Blacksburg and Radford adjacent to the Hercules Powder factory, the Government-built Radford arsenal of war days. It is a few miles from Roanoke, and easternmost point in Virginia's oil operations to date. Officials are highly secretive about the venture. Reports are that the drilling is now well below 2000 feet, in hard rock. It is an experiment that takes a large bankroll.

West and north of this experimental oil well, several large fuel and chemical firms are looking for natural gas. They'll take any oil they find on the way, too. Several report success.

Controls 325,000 Acres

One of the largest is the Clinchfield Coal Corp. of Dante, a mammoth corporation of legendary importance in these parts. Clinchfield owns 225,000 acres of coal lands on which it plans to explore for gas, and has leased upwards of another 100,000.

It already has brought in one well, spouting 1,800,000 cubic feet of gas a day, has two more drilling rigs in operation, and has contracts for an additional two, to start soon.

About 50 miles away in Buchanan County, the United Carbon Co. of Charleston, W. Va., has hit gas, which reliable authorities state flows at the enormous open flow test rate of 17 million cubic feet a day. It is drawing from a pool, however, that is reportedly of limited size.

Has 10 Wells Under Way

The Charleston company has about 10 wells under way, and plan more if they continue successful. Another operator is the Pipeline Construction Co. of Camp Hill, Pa., although little is known of its operations yet. Additional wells are being sunk by the Mathewson Salt Co.

These companies, which can afford it, are capping their wells, waiting for results from new diggings. They are unable to determine what size pipelines will be needed to transport the gas out of the area until they can judge how much gas will be available.

In the meantime, oil prospectors, including some prominent drillers, are attempting to acquire leases in Pulaski County, just beyond Radford. These leases begin just north of Radford on the Mrs. Sally Dent farm, and extend almost to Pulaski in the Dublin-Newbern area.

Farther south and to the west the Rose Hill Oil field, in which there was a wave of drilling a year ago, is still in operation. The Rouge Oil Co., an outfit from Baton Rouge, La., has been particularly successful in a small way here, with several paying wells.

Other companies that planned wildcat operations in these fields, including the Ohio Oil Co. have virtually withdrawn. Unfavorable Virginia laws, that require leaseholders to sink wells if oil is discovered nearby, have scared them off. The company was forced to dig on a leasehold, because a trace of oil, less than 10 barrels a day, was brought in 350 feet away.

The population in these parts is taking the activities calmly, one operator said—more phlegmatically than he had ever experienced elsewhere. He told of one farmer on whose land a comparatively large strike was made near Ewing. An excited driller rushed down the road yelling to him: "They've found oil!" The old man answered, without adjusting his "chaw": "Wasn't that what they was a-looking for?"

... Suburb of Washington in Fairfax County, Va., about eight miles from Zero Milestone.

For many years the nearest House of Worship to Great Falls, Va., was in a village miles distant. Thus the entire settlement derived its name—Falls Church.

Although incorporated in 1875, police census of 1885 omitted Falls Church—gave population of other suburbs at that time as: Brightwood 104—Mt. Herewith an opinion of the American League pennant race, retailing at one nickel:

POVICH

BOSTON—Ought to win it. The best club in the league in the last four months of 1948 and came from 11½ games behind to force Cleveland into a postseason playoff. Every club in the league is envious of Manager Joe McCarthy's power. Pesky, DiMaggio and Goodman getting on base and Stephens, Williams and Doerr driving them in. Their pitching can be no worse than last year. The kind of a team that almost won, despite the worst pitching in the league. Usually underrated as a defensive team. Ted Williams a vastly improved outfielder. Dom DiMaggio all by himself among centerfielders. Tex Hughson apparently headed for a big comeback after two years with a sore arm. Joe McCarthy an old hand at turning out pennant winners.

CLEVELAND—Definitely, the team to beat. Refused to fold last season when stamped by the Red Sox. Will have a new kind of assurance as 1948 champion. Solid in pitching, with Feller, Bearden, Lemon, Gromek, Paige. Bearden, however, could be one-year wonder. Has been getting his bumps in exhibition games. Vernon-Gordon-Boudreau-Keltner comprise league's finest infield on all counts. Doby in outfield may be league's next rising star of the Joe DiMaggio type. Hegan a standout among catchers. Boudreau the greatest inspirational leader and clutch performer in the business. Club is deep in coaching brains, and reserves. Outfield not tops defensively. Sacrificed hitting power in Vernon-for-Robinson trade with Nats. Will repeat only if Boudreau, Gordon, Keltner, Doby, Lemon, Bearden repeat the greatest year of their lives.

PHILADELPHIA—The only club with a chance of upsetting either the Red Sox or Indians, and not much chance. Can be labeled the best of the rest. Connie Mack's infield second only to the Indians', defensively. Fain the finest first baseman in the league. Joost almost as clever a shortstop as Boudreau. Could have league's second best pitching with Brissie, Coleman, Fowler, Scheib and Marchildon fit and ready. Added hitting power with Taft Wright in outfield, but hurt by McCosky's absence. Hank Majeski, at third base a terrific run-producer with his .310 average. Jimmy Dykes' addition as coach will enliven whole team. Rosar is one of the good catchers. The A's are no longer a club with an inferiority complex.

NEW YORK—A once-good ball club that is coming apart at the seams. Doomed as a pennant threat by Joe DiMaggio's injury. Without DiMaggio Yanks are just another ball club, and not impressive. Charley Keller still a question mark. Outfield will be very inferior if Tommy Henrich is called in to play first base. Rizzuto still bothered by sore arm. Bobby Brown is good-hit, no-field in any position he attempts in infield. Pitching will take Yankees wherever they are going, but the Yankee pitching is also suspect with Shea and Porterfield down with ailments. Raschi, Lopat, Reynolds, Byrne, Page could be formidable but Sanford is disappointment. New Manager Casey Stengel may have inherited a mess.

DETROIT—Better looking on paper than on the ball field. Tigers haven't been hitting a lick all spring. Unimpressive at either first or second base, but Kell and Lipon are a major league pair on right side of infield. Outfield unsettled, with Johnny Groth a sure-fire rookie. Wakefield, Wertz, Evers, Mullin have never justified their promises. Tigers will be tough when Newhouser and Hutchinson are pitching. Trout has been reduced to relief. Hostteman's auto accident a fearful blow to pitching staff. New Manager Red Rolfe gambling on rookie hurlers. Has added power in catcher Aaron Robinson. But don't add up to the first division.

WASHINGTON—A better ball club than the 1948 Senators, which could be faint praise. Won't get enough runs to be a first-division club, despite return of Buddy Lewis and addition of Eddie Robinson. Infield fair, catching good, outfield ordinary and pitching doubtful. Have reasonable expectancy of more hitting from Yost. Impossibly short-handed in reserves and gambling against injury. Coan could be sensation and take club higher, or flop. Scarborough the only solid pitcher. Hudson could be wunner'ful, again. Masterson and Haefner also shooting for comebacks. After them, pitching drops sharply. Not one of the fast clubs of the league.

ST. LOUIS—Will be battling Washington for sixth place. Will outhit the Senators but Browns' pitching is dubious. Zarilla a splendid outfielder, Rookie Kokos could also be star. Dillinger out-ranked only by Kell among third baseman. Priddy one of the better second basemen. Weak at shortstop, first base and catching. Sold off their biggest winner of 1948, Fred Sanford, to the Yankees for $100,000 and could ill afford to lose that kind of pitching. No hurler on club won more than 10 games last year, in majors. Zach Taylor imparts commendable spirit to Browns, but lacks manpower.

WHITE SOX—Deficient everywhere, except at shortstop and second base where Luke Appling and Cass Michaels hold forth. The worst-hitting club last season, with no change for the better noted. Gambling again on Pat Seerey in the outfield. Unimpressive otherwise in the outfield. New Manager Jack Onslow is going with only four pitchers who were in the majors last year. Is taking the biggest pitching gamble of any club. Catching improved, with Joe Tipton from Cleveland. First Baseman Steve Souchock hit .203 for Yankees last season. Were eighth from start to finish in 1948, and figure to hold their own.

Nats Lose Exhibition Finale to Orioles, 6-1

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Md., April 17.— Before an Easter Sunday gathering of 4292 fans, the Nats laid an egg here today, losing to the Baltimore O-ioles, 6-1, in their final exhibition game.

The Nat hitters couldn't arouse themselves against the minor leaguers and one of the two Washington pitchers, Dick Weik, was exactly that.

The rookie righthander, toiling for a job, probably worked himself back to Chattanooga. In his five-inning stint, he permitted all six Oriole runs on a mixture of four hits and nine walks. He walked 5 in the second inning, when 14 of the Birds batted in a five-run frame.

Gil Coan had the foresight of swatting a home run to open the game and the closest the Nats came to scoring after that was in the ninth inning when Eddie Robinson was thrown out at the plate to end the game.

Eight Hits Wasted

The Nats got eight hits off three Baltimore pitchers. Three of them, including Robinson's double, came in the ninth inning off Rookie Ernie Bickhous.

Against the combined hurling of Weik and Forrest Thompson, the Baltimoreans mustered six hits, all singles, but adequate in view of Weik's generosity.

After Coan had planted his four-master off former Brownie Bryan Stephens to start hostilities, the Orioles went to work on Weik in the second inning.

He walked Glen McQuillen and Don Richmond and Bingo Binks promptly singled in a run. Bob Repass' single broke the deadlock and Weik walked Pitcher Stephens after Frank Mancuso had grounded out to load the bases.

Kozar Boots It

Centerfielder Boris Woyt delivered two more runs with a single and two more Weik walks, the last to McQuillen, forced Stephens in with the fifth run of the inning.

Another single by former Nat Repass, a walk to Mancuso, Ellis Clary's infield out and Al Kozar's boot of Don Jones' roller added another run to Baltimore's total in the fifth inning.

Buddy Lewis, looking better each day, got two of Washington's hits, both singles and both well tagged.

IN SHORT—Ralph Weigel, the new catcher purchased from the White Sox, reported in and caught the last four innings. He hit into a force play in his only appearance at the plate . . . After making two errors, Al Kozar came up with the play of the day in the seventh inning when he raced behind second base to scoop up Frank Mancuso's grounder and turn it into a double play via Dente and Robinson . . . . Catcher Mancuso is one of four former Nats on the Baltimore club. Others are Clary, Binks and Repass . . . The Nats haven't beaten Baltimore in two years. In 1948, the Orioles won both exhibition games.

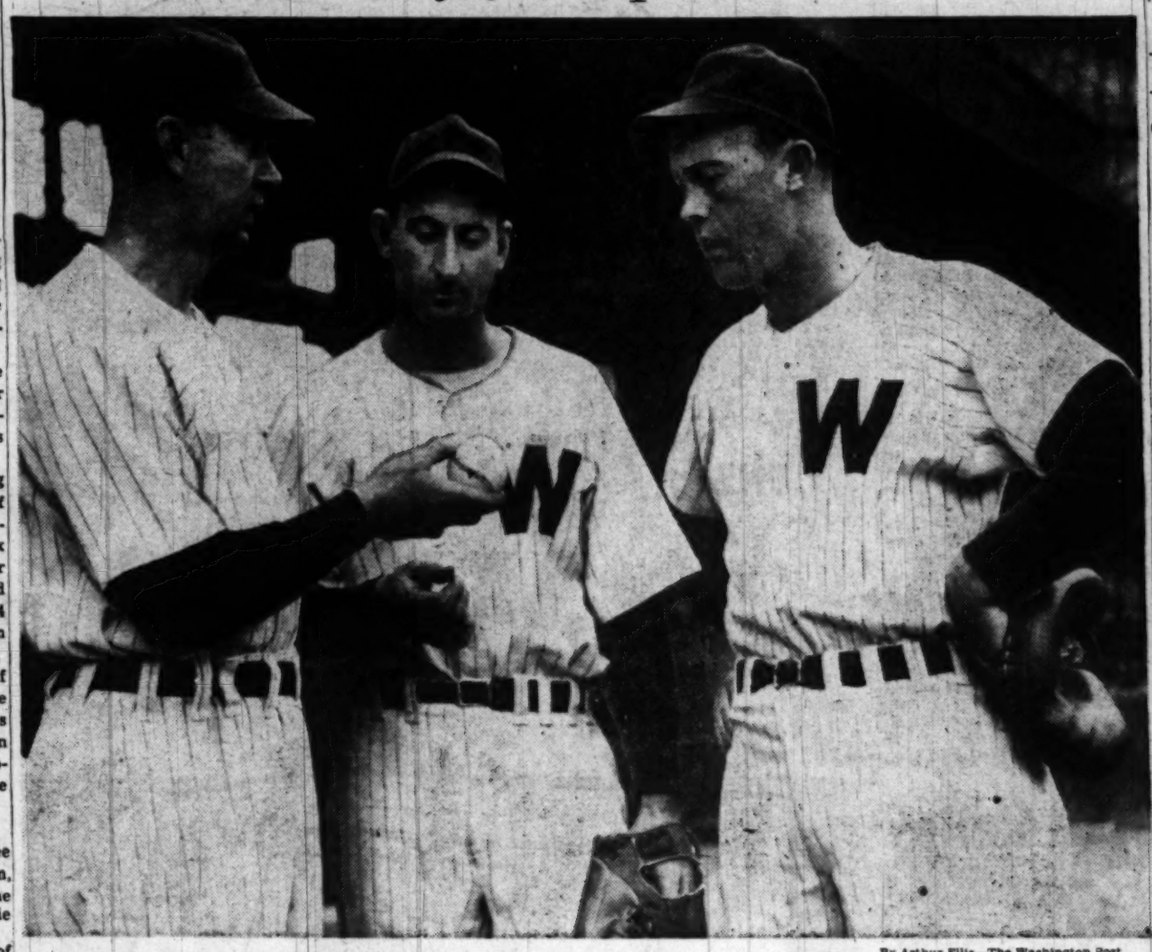
Nats Ready for Opener . . .



By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

IT'S UP TO THEM TODAY—Washington's hopes in the American League opener at Griffith Stadium today will hinge largely on this starting battery, here getting the final word of instruction from Manager Joe Kuhel (left). Even Tribe, Braves Bothered

Troubles Play No Favorites With Yanks, Reds Hardest Hit

New York, April 17 (AP).—The opening of the 1949 big league baseball season tomorrow finds every club beset by problems. Not even the world champion Cleveland Indians or the kingpin Boston Braves are immune from worry.

The biggest headaches are shared by the New York Yankees and the Cincinnati Reds. The Yankees are wondering just how many games Joe DiMaggio, their star centerfielder, can play on his painful right heel. He is certain not be in the line-up on opening day.

The Reds still haven't gotten an inning of pitching out of Ewell Blackwell, their right-handed ace. And furthermore, they don't know when they will. As a result, they are almost a solid choice for the National League cellar.

The four clubs which see action tomorrow—Washington and Philadelphia in the American League and Boston and Philadelphia in the National face the new season with headaches of their own.

The Senators, who meet the Athletics at Washington, are handicapped by the loss of Walter Masterson, one of their star pitchers, due to an appendectomy. Rae Scarborough, ace of the staff last year, is slated to face Dick Fowler for the A's.

The Braves, who meet the Phillies in the National League's solo, must know the answer to the following: are the broken ankles of Second Baseman Eddie Stanky and Outfielder Jeff Heath fully mended? Will Pete Reiser be able to go through the season without a mishap? Has Jimmy Russell recovered from his serious illness of last season?

The Phillies are crying for mound strength. For their opener they are forced to pit Ken Heintzelman, a 33-year-old lefthander, against Boston's ace, Johnny Sain, who was baseball's biggest winner last year.

On Tuesday the firing will become general in eight cities. In the American League, Cleveland will meet the Browns in St. Louis with Bob Feller opposing Ned Graver. Washington with Sid Hudson on the mound opposes the Yankees who will have Ed Lopat. Chicago plays at Detroit, with Allen Gettel facing the brilliant Hal Newhouser. Boston tangles with Philadelphia. Joe Dobson is slated to oppose sophomore Lou Brissie.

In the National it will be Philadelphia at Boston in a Patriots'

See TROUBLES, Page 15, Col. 3.

It's Play Ball In Boston, Too

Boston, April 17 (AP).—The Boston Braves get right down to the business of defending their National League pennant tomorrow with their ace hurler, Johnny Sain, slated to oppose Ken Heintzelman and the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Braves are putting their best foot forward in assigning Sain to labor in the opener for the big righthander had a 24-5 record last season.

Hentzelman had a 6-11 record last year.

The game will be preceded by a pennant-raising ceremony—the first in a Boston National League park in 34 years. President Ford Frick of the National League will be one of the guests.

Aside from Heintzelman, the big local interest in the Phils will be the debut of Eddie Waitkus in a Philadelphia uniform. The former Cubs star hails from nearby Cambridge, Mass.

Reds Beaten, 5-1, By Indianapolis

Indianapolis, Ind., April 17 (U.P.). The Cincinnati Reds closed their training schedule on a sour note today, dropping a 5-to-1 decision to the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association.

Millard (Dixie) Howell, the losing pitcher, was rocked for four runs in the first inning when the minor leaguers bunched two singles, a double a walk and a three-base error by Outfielder Johnny Wyrostek.

Bobo's Home Run Ball Loses Game, But He Has Alibi

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 17 (AP).—Louis (Bobo) Newsom failed to last the route here today in his first minor league start since 1933. He was the losing pitcher as Chattanooga dropped a 7-1 game to Nashville. A crowd of 8071 turned out to see the big fellow pitch.

The Vols greeted Bobo with six hits for five runs in the four innings he worked. Two of the blows were homers by Bama Ray and Carl Sawatski. He was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the fourth.

Newsom told reporters before the game that he hurt his ankle in a workout Saturday.

Hodges' Homer Beats Yanks

Brooklyn, April 17 (AP).—Gil Hodges blasted a grand slam home run today to lead the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 9-3 triumph over the New York Yankees. The victory enabled the Brooks to sweep the three-game series.

Hodges unloaded his jackpot wallop in a five-run seventh inning against Southpaw Joe Page, second Yankee pitcher. The Dodgers entered the lucky seventh out in front, 4-3.

Harry Taylor, Jack Banta and rookie Pat McGlothin worked for the Dodgers with Banta receiving credit for the victory. Yogi Berra slapped a pinch-hit homer off McGlothin in the ninth.

DiMaggio Leaves Baltimore for N. Y. Tuesday

Baltimore, April 17 (AP).—The doc says Joe DiMaggio is "doing very well —well enough to leave Baltimore, where he has been undergoing treatments for a sore heel.

Dr. George E. Bennett said tonight the slugging New York Yankee centerfielder will take off Tuesday for New York, where his mates will open the season against Washington. That was his only word on the $100,000-a-year ballplayer.

DiMaggio will continue treatment on his heel in New York.

Each played the 54 holes in six-under-par 201.

Stranahan and Locke will meet tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. (EST) in an 18-hole playoff for the specialists title.

But regardless of how the playoff winds up Locke, as the professional, is sure to pocket the $1500 top money.

Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, had to sink a 35-foot putt on the final hole to deadlock the Johannesburg, South Africa, star. Frankie spent considerable time lining up his all-important punt. He finally tapped it sharply, stood there while it rolled on a hill. Six inches from the hole the ball suddenly cut back and plopped in.

The shot gave Stranahan a birdie two on the difficult eighteenth for an afternoon round of four-below-par 65 over the 6065-ward course.

Scarborough To Face A's Fowler in 'Relief' Role

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Harry S. Truman, baseball fan, will shelve the business of running the United States for a while today, leave Europe to fend for itself a couple of hours, and make himself useful at getting the major league season started at Griffith Stadium.

He'll call for the family car, one of 'em, pack in a few important friends, head for the Stadium and try to break his own three-year losing streak as the Nats' honorary opening-game pitcher.

With Mrs. Truman presiding at the inaugural ceremonies, the Nats have yet to win and, in fact, will be seeking their first opening-game victory in six years when they meet up with Connie Mack's Athletics at 3 p. m.

Approximately 30,999 other baseball fans in addition to Mr. Truman will be on the premises as cash customers. At 2:45 p. m., the President will make his way into the park, and acknowledge the Army Band's "Hail to the Chief" with flourishes and ruffles. Five minutes later, Attorney General Tom Clark and Clark Griffith will lead the parade to the flagpole.

Mr. Truman will throw out the opening ball at 3 p.m., and immediately the Nats, the Athletics and the 31,000 will stand on no more ceremony. After all, they came for the ball game.

At the risk of losing the Philadelphia vote the President has made it known that he will be rooting for the Nats who represent his "second home town." He has refused to disclose, however, whether he will repeat his 1947 stunt of using a left-handed delivery, when he won honors as the first ambidextrous-pitching occupant of the White House.

But there is a remote chance somebody might get wet. Last night's weather prediction was "mostly cloudy, milder, with some chance of a brief shower."

Chandler Will Attend

Three thousand reserved bleacher seats will go on sale at 9 o'clock this morning, with the gates opening at 11 a. m. Standing room tickets to the number of 2500 will go on sale a half hour before the game time.

Ray Scarborough, new to opening game pitching honors, will take over the hurling when the President is comfortably seated. He will be working for a Washington team shot through with changes since its seventh-place finish of last season.

It will commence, at least as a duel between the top right-handers of the two clubs—Scarborough vs. Dick Fowler. The sturdy curveballing Scarborough, and the elongated 6-foot-4-inch Fowler, had identical records of 15 wins and 8 losses for their clubs last year.

The Washington inaugural will have the blessing also of Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler, hurrying here from his Carew Tower, Cincinnati headquarters, to be present, even as he never missed in the years when he was the Senator from Kentucky.

In the Athletics, the Nats will be meeting up with 86-year-old Connie Mack's dark horse club of

They are not allowed to hawk their wares on track property any more, but the fellows who sell tip cards, ratings, etc., are still part of a day at the races. Along the route from the train to the grandstand gate these men are in their glory. They have big cards in their hats—"Freezy Sneezy, $89.40," etc. Pinned on their coats are lists of their winners of recent days, mostly legit, too. But not satisfied with reading ads, they give leather-lunged cries of "Yesterday I gave you four winners," etc. Imagine my surprise when I came across a rather meek-looking, well-dressed tipster holding his tip card aloft and chanting quietly, "I do not claim all the winners. However, I may be of some assistance to you in determining your selections."—BILL.

Willard Has 6 RBI to Sink Indians 8-3

New York, April 17 (AP).—Willard Marshall, battling for a regular outfield berth, batted in six runs today to lead the New York Giants to a 8-3 triumph over the Cleveland Indians before 10,624 fans.

Marshall, whose hitting has picked up recently, accounted for three of New York's nine hits with a homer, double and single.

The Giants nicked starter Frank Papish for three runs in the second inning and two in the third. Sid Gordon accounted for one of the markers with his fourteenth homer of the spring in the third. Marshall reached Papish for a three-run homer in the fifth to complete the Giant scoring. Bob Lemon toiled the final three innings, allowing one hit.

The Indians, however, won the long series which started last month in Arizona eight games to seven.

Tigers Triumph, 4-2; Kiner Homers for Bucs

Pittsburgh, April 17 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers won a 4-2 exhibition over the Pittsburgh Pirates before 11,434 shivering fans today.

Gilt-edged hurling by the Tigers' Virgil Trucks and Marv Grissom held the Buccos in check till the last of the ninth when Ralph Kiner hit a homer with one aboard and saved the Bucs from a shutout.

Cards' Homers Beat Brownies, 7 to 4

St. Louis, April 17 (AP).—The 1949 spring series between St. Louis' major league baseball clubs wound up in a deadlock today as the Redbirds notched a 7 to 4 triumph over the Browns.

It marked the 17th time in history that the series ended in a tie. The Browns have won 18 spring series and lost 10.

Four home runs enabled the Cards to triumph today. Red Schoendienst, Ron Northey, Stan Musial and Nippy Jones hit four baggers for the Birds

PICKEREL WITH A PLOT—Barber Joe Perrone didn't have much to do with this fish story climax, and the 25-inch pickerel is past doing much about it. Both were good stage props, however, for a denouement that was precipitated when William E. Bouchard (right) refused to take his daughter, Francis Bouchard (left), on a fishing trip in his boat. The 11-year-old girl countered by fishing off the Worcester, Mass., wharf. That's where the fish came in, got hooked and was lugged to a near-by barbershop where Pop was getting his locks trimmed. Daughter gets the last laugh (shared by Joe the barber), while Pop squirms. He caught nothing from his boat

TROUBLES—From P. 14

All Major League Teams Have Troubles

Day doubleheader. New York at Brooklyn will pit Larry Jansen against Joe Hatten; Pittsburgh at Chicago will see Murry Dickson pitching against Dutch Leonard, and St. Louis at Cincinnati sends Howie Pollet against Ken Raffensberger.

The Indians, with all their wealth, must know for sure whether Feller will return to his pitching greatness of yore. So far, he's been well belabored nearly every time he toed the slab. Then too, there's the little matter of who is going to play right field. So far, six flychasers have had a crack at it.

Although liked by many experts to come out on top, the Dodgers have a definite weakness at first base, which they've attempted to strengthen by trades that didn't jell.

Pittsburgh, a dark horse in the National League, is plagued by old age. Seven of the front line pitchers are past 30. The Pirates have problems at first and third.

The Cardinals are a real "if" club. They may open the season with three rookies in the infield, a second baseman in the outfield, and one of the weakest catching staffs in the league.

The Giants start the season with one big league pitcher, a crippled catcher, and a hole at second base caused by injuries and illness to Billy Rigney and Rookie Bob Hofman.

Joe McCarthy, Red Sox manager, still hasn't made up his mind on Walter Dropo, his giant first-base hopeful. If Dropo comes through, the Sox will be in a commanding position to wrest the American League flag from the Indians.

The A's need more power and hope that Sam Chapman can provide it. They are sorely lacking in reserves. The Tigers also need more power, and would like to get another top-flight pitcher to go along with Newhouser.

Rock Crashes Windshield Alexandrian Wins Hybla Auto Race Despite Accident

Roadster auto racing got off to a roaring start at the Hybla Valley Speedway yesterday when 10,000 persons turned out to see Ronnie Cash of Alexandria, Va., survive hurling rocks, flying glass and an inch-long gash over his left eye to score a thrilling grand slam.

Driving a speed Mercury, the 31-year-old Cash swept his qualifying heat, semifinal and the 25-lap feature to duplicate the feat that marked his debut into roadster racing at Winchester, Va., a year ago to the day.

In a special run before the regular program, Cash was cut above the eye and dazed by a loose rock from the dirt track which tore through his windshield. The damaged windshield began flying off in pieces in Cash's qualifying race but he tore the jagged remains from his car while continuing to drive to victory.

After winning his semifinal, Cash was sixth to start off in the feature, but he passed his closest rival, Carl Anderson of Arlington, Va., on the twelfth lap and never relinquished the lead.

Cash finished in the time of 13 minutes ahead of Anderson, who was driving a borrowed car after his motor conked, and Joe Jernigan of Norfolk, Va.

West Boxes Bussey Tonight at Turner's

Confident no mistakes will be made again, "Sonny Boy" West, the 19-year-old local lightweight champion, will go after a newcomer to Turner's Arena, Talmadge (Buzz) Bussey of Detroit, in tonight's feature 10-rounder which ends the indoor season here.

West dropped a decision to Doug Ratford, veteran New York battler, two weeks ago but his handlers think that the setback may have done Sonny Boy some good.

West has a record of only four losses in 39 bouts and is ranked as the fifth leading contender for Ike Williams' crown by the National Boxing Association.

Bussey, however, is also banking heavily on a win tonight. Buzz has been promised a 10-rounder on Joe Louis' first Detroit promotion later this month and therefore can't afford to lose this one.

A five-round supporting bout shows 19-year-old Leon Daughtry, District Golden Gloves welter champion, in his first pro fight as he meets Roy Wirt of Roanoke, Va.

Four rounders pit Walter Hamm against Don Weber; Ralph Gonzales meets Walter Dess; Don Krupin takes on Herbie Stowe, and Tunney Jones opposes Henry Porter.

Bosox Beat Braves, 4-3; Win Series

Boston, April 17 (AP).—Thanks to a forced run in the eighth inning, the Boston Red Sox swept the intra-city series with the Braves today by pulling out a 4-3 win before a teeth-chattering 8171 crowd at Fenway Park.

It gave the American Leaguers their fourth triumph in the seven-game series that opened in Bradenton, Fla., last month.

The setback was a heartbreaker for lefty Johnny Antonelli, the Tribe's 19-year-old bonus pitcher, who went the full disfance in highly impressive fashion

Stranahan, Locke Tie in Specialists

Locke's putter in recent tournaments had disappeared in this one. For Locke was the only one of the event's 20 aces who managed to conquer par 69 in all three rounds. He moved around this morning in 68 and fired a 66 this afternoon.

For a while, it appeared that Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn., and Jim Ferrier of San Francisco, were certain to end in a stalemate with scores of 202. Both had afternoon 65s after Middlecoff had scored a 70 and Ferrier a 66 this morning.

Washington's Lew Worsham carded a 69 on his final 18 holes to finish th 54-hole medal competition with a 215, 14 strokes back of the leaders.

Calumet Ace Shows Well In Workouts

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Zest may be added to this week's racing at Havre de Grace by the appearance in action of Calumet Farm's Coaltown.

The famous speedster, chief reliance of Calumet when Citation went on the shelf, is eligible for both of the big handicaps—Wednesday's $10,000 Philadelphia at 6 furlongs, and Saturday's $15,000 Edward Burke at a mile and a sixteenth.

Coaltown has been working in satisfactory style. Trainer Jimmy Jones hasn't made up his mind about the horse. He could use the Philadelphia as a sharpener for the long Burke and shoot for both.

Or with Coaltown's objective after the 'Graw the Dixie Handicap at Pimlico, Jones may elect to send his start postward only in the Burke, preferring the distance test to the sprint.

In either race, Coaltown would be a standout favorite.

Others Eligible

Among the sprinters expected to appear in the Philadelphia are: Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Big Story; H. G. Bedwell's Daily Dip; Bobanet Stable's King Midas; Brookfield Farm's Itsabe; Richard E. Carer's Oriole; Greentree Stable's Blue Border; William Helis' Mr. Ace; Dion K. Kerr, jr.'s Flying Weather; S. W. Labrot's Repand; Mrs. O. L. Nyberg's Irisen and P. A. Rothluss' Gain A'Foot.

Several of these are also eligible for the Burke and there is a possibility that they will take a crack at both events. In addition to Coaltown, the Calumet forces have Faultless as an eligible. Other nominees include: Christiana Stable's Alexis and Service Pilot, Gardenia Stable's Roman Candle, Mrs. H. K. Haggerty's Rampart, King Ranch's Task, E. A. Nicodemus' Laran, Mrs. S. M. Pistorio's Golden Bull, H. L. Straus' Pilaster, C. C. Tanner's Nearway and G. R. Watkins' Cat Bridge.

BETWEEN RACES—Calumet Farm has a budding-star 2-year-old who may make his debut at the Graw. He's a colt named Foremost and the stable help believes he will outshine even Citation, Whirlaway and Coaltown. He is by Whirlaway out of Twilight Tear which is silver-spoon-in-mouth breeding as any Maryland turf follower will tell you . . . Apprentice Jockey Mike Mafale left for New England where he rode 19 winners last year . . . Ray Haight, who is airing two Charles Town races daily over Silver Spring Station WGAY, picked six winners, for The Post Consensus on Saturday's card at the West Virginia oval (take a bow, son) the pennant race, generally rated as a third-place team with a chance of outstripping both Cleveland and the Red Sox.

Truman Will Try to End 3-Game Loss Streak Today

A six-deep pitching staff and one of the slickest infields in the league, with Ferris Fain on first base and the ubiquitous Eddie Joost at shortstop, have earned the A's their high rating. And today will mark the return of their former fire-brand, Jimmy Dykes, to the majors, as Mack's third base coach.

In four positions the Nats will be a different club than the 1948 stragglers and on view officially for the first time will be big Ed Robinson, the hefty first baseman who was the chief consideration in the deal that sent Mickey Vernon and Early Wynn to Cleveland.

Kuhel Rates Coan as Key

From Robinson at first base, from Clyde Vollmer in center field with a record of 32 home runs in the International League last year, and from ex-Brown Sam Dente at shortstop, Manager Joe Kuhel is seeking the power and polish to make the Nats a better club in 1949.

For Washington fans there will be another gratification in the return to a Nats' unifrom of Buddy Lewis, after a year's voluntary retirement from the game, and bringing with him a lifetime average of .300. He is a fixture in right field.

Up from the South, too, have come Eddie Yost, new hitting sensation of the Senators, who compiled a .400 average in the spring game and has been promoted to fifth place in the batting order; and Gil Coan, similarly a .400 hitter in the exhibitions.

Manager Joe Kuhel, emphatic in his declaration that the Nats are a vastly improved club, yesterday signalled out Coan as the man who could be the chief determining factor. "If this is the year when Coan makes good, he'll do it in a big way, and he'll take us a long way," said Kuhel.

Dallas, Tex., April 17 (AP).—The organ played "Three Blind Mice" and 34 umpires turned around and "booed" fans out to see Dallas and Oklahoma play a Texas League game.

This was the "mystery" stunt promised by the Dallas owner, Oilman Dick Burnett. Burnett, who has spent more than a million dollars since buying Dallas last year, is out to set a new attendance record.

The 34 umpires were members of the staffs of the Big State, East Texas, Longhorn, Rio Grande Valley and West Texas-New Mexico Leagues.

Orders Issued to 'Freeze' Personnel In Many Government Agencies

The "freeze" is on in many Federal agencies. It means (1) that it's more difficult than ever to get a Government job, and (2) fewer promotions and reallocation of jobs are being approved.

More than a score of agencies have issued personnel "freeze" orders in some form during the past several days. Most of them are facing reductions of personnel under the House-approved independent offices money bill.

The General Accounting Office, for example, has issued a stiff "freeze" order. Under it, very few vacancies can be filled, promotions won't be made, and everything will be done to save money. GAO would have to fire between 700 and 900 employes under the House bill.

Another hard personnel "freeze" is on at the Civil Service Commission which would lose about 750 employes under the House bill. Public Buildings, Budget Bureau, Council of Economic Advisors, Federal Trade, Maritime Commission and Securities and Exchange Commission are other agencies tightening their belts in anticipation of layoffs.

Veterans' Administration also has a "freeze" on most of its activities. Its personnel problem was outlined here yesterday. It was brought out here that the Appropriations Committee directed VA not to reduce personnel in its hospital and medical programs in laying off more than 17,000 employes.

However, during House debate on the VA bill, Representative Rogers (R., Mass.) indicated that 6674 hospital and medical employes also would have to be fired under the bill. She said that on April 1, VA had 117,030 employes in this work, or 6674 more than the number allowed in the House-approved bill.

Moreover, Mrs. Rogers said, the VA expects to add 9937 hospital beds during the 1950 fiscal year—beds which would require 15,549 additional employes to service. She urged an increase of 48 million dollars over the Budget Bureau and House budgets to operate the beds. Mrs. Rogers said she believed the Senate would add the money to the bill. She also said that 3484 hospital beds couldn't be used because of the lack of personnel to service them.

Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.) has in a bill to set up a mechanical service to cover per annum mechanical employes in Government. These mechanics are among Uncle Sam's "forgotten employes" . . . The Senate Civil Service Committee has okayed the bill which would allow former employes who had up to 20 years of service to forego pensions and withdraw their money, with interest, from the Civil Service retirement system . . . A proposal to raise the salary of the chairman of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics to $15,000 a year was killed in the House.

Firings: Civil Service has ordered the firings of war service and temporary employes here in seven types of jobs who either didn't compete in appropriate tests for their jobs, or who didn't make high enough marks on the competitive exams. The jobs and grades are:

At Guard Rodeo

8-Year-Old Thrills on High Wire

An appealing hodge-podge of cowboy riding and circus daredevil, billed as the Texas Rodeo, took over the National Guard Armory yesterday for an eight-day stay.

For way over two hours wild horses and steers alternated with graceful trapezists, tight-rope walkers, motorcyclists and trained dogs.

Prima donna by almost unanimous choice of last night's audience of less than 2000 was 8-year-old Shirley Gretona, who tripped along the tight rope with eye-popping poise and skill.

First, the little button-nosed blonde from Richmond, Ind., took over the microphone to heckle her father, Otto Gretona, who teetered with careful abandon across the wire.

Then the pert little trouper climbed on up to show him how it was done. Back and forth she crossed as if she was weaned on it.

There were docile, stately steeds who rolled on their backs at the beck of their masters and there were unmanageable beasts who would not stop fussing until they had unsaddled their riders.

But there was no Peg Leg diving "90 feet into a pool of flaming oil" as the advance newspaper ads claimed. According to the management; the fire department vetoed the act but a motorcyclist was allowed to run his bike through a flaming fence.

The lions, tigers and Indians that had also been advertised were also among the missing.

A reward of $1000 for anyone in the audience who could stay on that fierce steer "Big Sid" was offered as scheduled but the animal turned out to be a relative of Big Sid's. Danny Cason, a 27-year-old carpenter of 611 31st. se., tried. The steer, an enormous critter with coffee nerves, dumped Danny almost instantaneously.

Cowboy Rogers, who is not to be confused with Roy Rogers, was on hand with his horse, Silver Flash, for a trick riding stint. (Silver Flash, incidentally, is no relation to the Lone Ranger's Silver.)

At the afternoon performance a 19-year-old cowgirl, Lois DeMaris of Fort Worth, Tex., was thrown from her horse during a trick riding routine. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital, treated for abrasions about the shoulders and released.

Alcoholic Clinic Has $150,000

Fund Available From Liquor Taxes With Early Naming Of Wexberg As Head

The expected appointment of Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, director of the Health Department Bureau of Mental Hygiene, as director of the District alcoholic clinic, will release some $150,000 available for treatment of the addicted here.

District Commissioner Guy A. Mason has directed Secretary Victor A. Howard of the District Personnel Board to draw up papers authorizing Dr. Wexberg to serve in the dual capacity. The appointment may be announced after a Commissioners' meeting Tuesday.

Since the clinic was authorized by the Hebert Act, signed in August, 1947, about $150,000 has piled up from increases in alcoholic beverage license fees, which Congress provided to finance the clinic.

The Citizens' Advisory Committee on the clinic previously had recommended the internationally known psychiatrist for the post, but his candidacy was withdrawn when he said he would accept only if he could retain his present $7100 position, since he was interested in remaining in the mental hygiene field. The new directorship will add $1000 to his salary.

Recently, Health Officer George C. Ruhland recommended him for the position and said one person could be appointed to the double job under the law. The single appointment to both jobs will save the District from paying two salaries, of $7100 and $8100, for the two directorships.

Under the Hebert Act, Municipal Court judges may sentence chronic alcoholics to the clinic for 30 days' treatment in lieu of jail sentences.

Director Donald Clemmer of the Corrections Department yesterday hailed prospective establishment of the long-delayed clinic. Between 600 and 700 men and women whose only offense is intoxication are serving time in the District on any given day now, he said, costing the taxpayers about $1000 daily.

He said he hoped Dr. Wexberg will have a mobile clinic which can be sent to the District Reformatory and District Jail to prepare inmates in attitude for voluntary clinic treatment, which is also authorized by the Hebert Act.

Clemmer, a member of the advisory committee on the clinic, also said he would recommend that the clinic devote most of its treatment to the more chronic and more destitute alcoholics.

Others injured were: Raymond Creech, 20, brother of Paul and George Creech, address not immediately available; and Earl Horne, 35, Della Mae Whitehead and Ollie Reffinger, jr., all of Wilson, N. C.

All of the injured, police said, were in the Washington-bound car. All were taken to Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg.

Virginia State police said a third car, driven by John C. Parker, 4821 N. 33d rd., Arlington, struck the two collided cars, but no one in his car was hurt.

Earlier yesterday, a University of Maryland coed and a Fairfax County (Va.) farmer died as a result of traffic accidents occurring in the past week.

The dead in these accidents were:

Helen Patricia Brown, 21, of Greenbelt, Md., a University of Maryland honor student.

John E. Bischoff, 72, a farmer of Route 2, Herndon, Va.

Miss Brown was injured in a head-on collision Saturday night about 3 miles from Warrenton, Va., on Route 211. She died at 11:43 a.m. yesterday at Physicians Hospital, Warrenton. Eight other persons were injured in the accident, which happened at 8:50 p.m.

The girl was an accomplished musician, playing with the Greenbelt Band and the University of Maryland Orchestra. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Brown, of 58-F Crescent rd., Greenbelt.

Miss Brown was one of six passengers in a car driven by Joseph Henricks Bilbrey, 27, of 201 Princeton ave., College Park, Md. Police said the other car, driven by Clifton Ennis, 27, 2105 4th st. ne., had passed an automobile and didn't get back into lane soon enough to avoid collision with the Bilbrey car.

Others in the Bilbrey car who were injured were:

Stuart Troy Haywood, 27, 7304 Hopkins ave., College Park, body cuts.

Margaret Brown, 19, sister of the dead girl, also a student at University of Maryland, broken arm and cuts on body.

Sylvia G. Cary, 27, of 4804 Berwyn rd., Berwyn, Md., a bacteriologist at Walter Reed Hospital, head injuries.

Her brother, Boyd Cary, jr., 23, a student at University of Maryland, cuts on body.

Bilbrey suffered a fractured left arm and other injuries.

Ennis and his brother, Maurice B. Ennis, 22, both suffered dislocated hips, and Allen Edmonds, 21, 5107 N st. se., passenger in the Ennis car, was treated for shock and minor bruises.

Bischoff died at Arlington Hospital. He was injured Thursday when his automobile and a truck collided at Routes 7 and 28 in Fairfax County. Driver of the truck, Howard P. Livermore, 40, of Winchester, Va., was under $500 bond on a reckless driving charge.

The other traffic fatality was Mrs. Pearl Sayre, 32, of 619 Jefferson ave., Falls Church, who died last night in a Petersburg, W. Va., hospital, as result of an accident near Athens, Ohio.

Ohio State policemen said Mrs. Sayre was in a car driven by her husband, Richard G. Sayre, 34, when it skidded on U. S. Route 50 and overturned, throwing Mrs. Sayre to the highway.

Edward E. Snoddy, 42, of 1131 D st. ne., was injured seriously shortly after midnight yesterday while standing at the back of his parked automobile removing articles from the trunk.

The auto of Raymond R. McConchie, 54, 245 11th st. se. and a streetcar operated by Richard H. Wheaton, 23, 1341 East Capitol st. collided at 12th and D sts. ne. The car swerved and struck the back of Snoddy's car, crushing him against the car.

Snoddy was taken to Casualty Hospital with a compound fracture of the left leg, injuries to the right leg and undetermined other injuries.

Woman Burned To Death as Fire Sweeps SE Home

Firemen Rescue 5 By Ladder At Early Morning L Street Blaze

A 71-year-old woman perished early yesterday when flames swept through her home at 1604 Frankford st. se.

The victim was Mrs. Mabel Thomas, who was alone in the house when the flames broke out. Police said her body was found near a window in the kitchen. She was pronounced dead at the scene at 2:15 a. m.

Police said the fire, of undetermined origin, apparently started in the living room while Mrs. Thomas was in bed on the second floor. Her son, John Thomas, had gone out for the evening, they said.

The entire house was in flames by the time firemen arrived, police reported. Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy said chemical tests will be made to determine whether death was caused by smoke or flames.

One person was injured and five others were rescued by ladder during a two-alarm fire at 1901 L st. nw., about 5:45 a. m. yesterday.

Treated at Emergency Hospital for burns to his face and left arm and shock, was Doctor Ball, 55, occupant of the second floor front room where the fire originated from a burning mattress, police said.

Police said the fire spread through the second and third floors of the building, but that the first floor, consisting of a restaurant, was not damaged by flames.

Annie Hicks was rescued by firemen, who brought her down a ladder from a second-floor window. Weldon Dewer, 47, his wife, Evelyn Dewer, 43; his son, Ulysses Dewer, 28 and his sister-in-law Annie Baker, 51, were rescued by ladder from the third floor.

Postlude

Miss Dobbs Pleasant in Rare Songs

By Richard Keith

Mattiwilda Dobbs, young soprano, presented a pleasant Easter afternoon recital yesterday at the Phillips Gallery. Her program was made up almost entirely of seldom heard songs, most of them in the Easter spirit. It is young rising singers like Miss Dobbs, with their unusual programs, who bring relief to the concert-weary reviewer.

She opened with a group of early German religious songs. Her singing of Graun's simple but exalted "Resurrection" was remarkable for its delicacy.

Schubert's "Hunter's Evening Son," which Miss Dobbs included in her second group, is one of the finest of the great song writer's compositions and it is hard to see why it has been so neglected. In its modest strophic form, it expresses, somewhat resignedly, the sorrows of unrequited love.

The aria from Mozart's "Seraglio," which followed, was an unfortunate choice on the part of the singer. Although the extremely difficult passages were managed quite well, she does not yet have the requisite strength and self-assurance to cope successfully with a piece of this stature.

Her group of modern American songs came off very well, partly because of the musical merit of the compositions and partly because they were so well suited to the best style of the performer.

Miss Dobbs' voice is unusually pleasant to listen to. It is seldom harsh and yet is remarkably clear especially when soft. A somewhat too broad tremolo and a tendency to sneak up on each tone are flaws in its perfection which, with proper treatment, should disappear in time. Her interpretations are good but could be made more effective by further study in diction.

Separate Vice, Gaming Units Considered

Police Supt. Robert J. Barrett said yesterday he is considering separating gambling investigations from the work of the vice squad to equalize distribution of work.

He said he had discussed the proposal with other police officials during the past few months, but has made no definite plans for a change at this time.

The present method of having the vice squad, under Lieut. Roy Blick, handle gambling cases in addition to prostitution and other vice investigations has put a double load on the squad's shoulders, he explained.

"The men in the vice squad have been doing an excellent job, but they've had to work night and day to handle both vice and gambling cases. Some of that work should be taken over by someone else," Barrett declared.

He emphasized that if the change is made it will not be a criticism of the work of Blick or his squad.

"I think the man who heads the vice squad should hold the rank of an inspector because of the work required. It's my ambition that Lieutenant Blick get the promotion he deserves and I'm going to do what I can to see that he gets it," Barrett said.

He said he had no idea which inspector might be named to supervise gambling investigations if a change is made.

If the change is made, he said, gambling will still be under his supervision, with the inspector in charge reporting directly to him as Blick is now doing, Barrett said.

He added that nothing would be done about changing the present setup before the special grand jury investigating gambling adjourns.

Labor Saving Idea Pays Off—$237

A bright idea paid off for Herman C. Hurd, a labor supervisor in the office services division of the Civil Service Commission.

Hurd, who lives at 805½ 10th st. nw., was awarded $237 for suggesting use of a portable electric hoist to speed some of the commission's heavy moving chores in its main building.

In awarding the sum to Hurd, Commission President Harry B. Mitchell said use of the hoist will save the agency more than $9000 annually and reduce manual labor by one half.

Mitchell said Hurd's idea "shows the sort of teamwork and thoughtful, on-the-job planning that makes for better and more economical Government operations."

Negroes' Use Of Roosevelt High Urged

Transfer of Roosevelt High School to use of Negro pupils has been recommended by a teachers' union to alleviate overcrowding in Washington Negro schools.

The suggestion was made in a letter from Washington Local No. 27, American Federation of Teachers to the Board of Education.

The communication, signed by Paul Cooke, president of the local, urged that as an alternative, Central High School be transferred from white to Negro status.

The letter cited a recent school survey conducted for Congress by Dr. George D. Strayer, which said the three Negro high schools, Dunbar, Cardozo and Armstrong, were overcrowded by respectively 28 per cent, 112 per cent, and 24 per cent.

Cooke laid "the high percentage of failure of Negro high school students" and the large number of Negro pupils who discontinue their schooling after the junior high grades to inadequate facilities and crowded conditions.

"We teachers were considerably heartened when the Board of Education strongly supported Spingarn High in the 1950 budget," Cooke's letter said, "when the board approved a new Armstrong High School in the planning stage, and when the papers reported consideration of a new Cardozo at Georgia ave. and Barry pl.

"But not one of these new high school projects has materialized; Spingarn is out of the 1950 budget, Armstrong was never in the budget and the new Cardozo is still a gleam in somebody's eye."

Mary Walker, 32, of 323 Pleasant ct. sw., and James Pettis, 41, also of the Pleasant ct. address, were admitted to Gallinger Hospital, both with slashed necks. The fight, police said, involved another man and took place at the Pleasant ct. address.

Harry Lee Isaacs, 24, of 1015½ 7th st. nw., was admitted to Freedmen's Hospital, stabbed in the abdomen by an unidentified man during an argument in the 1100 block of 7th st. nw.

Synthetic Fuel One Marvel Of Mines Bureau Open House

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Ever have the mildly worrisome thought strike you—perhaps while you're driving in your gleaming new car down the highway—that some day the supply of gasoline might run out?

The best answer for the layman is a simple "forget it." Whether you know it or not, you're paying experts to figure this one out for you.

Many of these same experts are working on it every day at the eastern experiment station of the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines, on the University of Maryland campus. They have long since developed synthetic fuels which will power cars and airplanes.

They're pointing for that day when the petroleum supply is exhausted, or even looks like it.

Open House Thursday

That, of course, is only one phase of the eastern experiment station's activities. Next Thursday, says Paul M. Ambrose, station superintendent, you can wander through the 14-acre, seven-building installation to your heart's content. It's "open house," and what you will see may surprise you.

For instance, and on the more spectacular side, Ambrose and his 225 coworkers are preparing to simulate mining hazards, such as gas and dust explosions. You'll witness the explosions on laboratory scale.

Also on tap are demonstrations of what the Bureau of Mines terms the "application of physics to mining." Translated, this means you'll watch physicists eavesdrop on the grumblings of mine rocks—noises inaudible to the ear—to determine whether a cave-in is imminent.

The idea of the open house, however, is for the public to visit the station to get some notion of what the Bureau of Mines is doing. The fact that 1949 is the 100th anniversary of the Department of the Interior is also a reason for the open house.

According to Superintendent Ambrose, who with his wife and two sons lives at 4305 Van Buren st., University Park, one of the most important things the bureau has done in the field of metallurgy is the development of methods for the production of titanium.

Titanium is the fourth most abundant structural metal in the earth's crust, ranking behind aluminum, iron and magnesium, Ambrose reports. While but a few hundreds of pounds weekly are being produced now, ultimately it likely will replace many metals now in extensive use.

Because of its light weight, strength and ability to withstand corrosion, he predicts it will find a wide variety of uses—in aircraft, in portable military equipment, in marine installations where metal is exposed to sea water, and in other things.

The Bureau of Mines, says Ambrose, who has been with it 14 years, is charged with "safety and technical aspects of mining, milling and processing of our mineral raw materials."

New Machines Used

What this amounts to, more or less, is the prying by scientists and technologists into the secrets of Nature. To assist in the work, these experts have called into use more machines, instruments and devices than you can shake a stick at.

In the physical metallurgical section, for example, is a 1000-ton metal press, a forging hammer, a differential temperature recorder, a dilatometer, and on and on.

James R. Long of 2006 Dayton st., Silver Spring, head of the section, gave up a teaching post in the Naval Academy's postgraduate department to work with these machines. It is exciting work, he says.

The development of titanium, he predicts, will "go snowballing along like aluminum has." Twenty-five years ago, according to Long, aluminum was in the same stage as titanium is now.

N. Y. Central Plans Post For Aldrich

New York, April 17 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad Co. announced today Winthrop W. Aldrich and Albert B. Dick, jr., would be proposed as members of the board of directors at the annual stockholders' meeting on May 25.

Aldrich is chairman of the Chase National Bank of New York and Dick is chairman of the office equipment manufacturing company at Chicago which bears his name. Dick has been on the board since February 9, succeeding New York Central's secretary, Joseph O'Mahoney. O'Mahoney continues as secretary.

Aldrich, a newcomer to New York Central, is a director of a half dozen or so of the country's most prominent organizations. Included are the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Westinghouse Electric, International Paper, General Education Board, Rockefeller Foundation, Metropolitan Life, and Federal Reserve Bank of New York. He is a brother-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, jr.

New York Central's announcement said:

"Winthrop W. Aldrich, who is and has been since January 10, 1934, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York has been chosen as a nominee by the management of the company at the request of that bank, which, in accordance with requirements of the Interstate Commerce Commission, holds as independent voting trustee 400,000 shares of capital stock of the company beneficially owned by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co." This angle was not further discussed.

Robert R. Young is chairman of the Chesapeake & Ohio. He has tried repeatedly to secure a place on the New York Central board for himself and an associate. Last year the railroad invited him to become a member after Young published a series of full-page "Memo. to the New York Central" advertisements in newspapers.

The invitation was contingent upon approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and an examiner for the commission turned it down some time after it was proposed. Young bitterly criticized the action.

Correct Way to Broil a Steak

I have searched my many cookbooks for advice on broiling steak, but still they won't brown as I want them to. I place steak in 500-degree oven (electric) a few inches away from the broiler and smoke pours out and blinds me for 15 minutes. When done, steak fat is burned, steak an unattractive gray. Tastes all right, but not my idea of good steak. Please explain if possible correct "trick." Oh, cookbooks all say "leave oven door open a crack." If you do, temperature drops all at once, I'm all mixed up! J. H. W.

Steaks can be broiled beautifully in an electric oven. To do it set the temperature control at "broil" rather than 500 degrees. In many makes of electric stoves this will turn on just the top element in the oven. Now place the steak 6 to 8 inches under the heating element to broil it. If placed too near the heat, the fat will burn (as yours did, with resulting smoke) before the meat has a chance to brown. If you are still unable to broil a good steak from these suggestions, call the Home Service Department of the electric power company in your area. They will be able to give you suggestions for your specific make of stove.

Would you publish directions for making soap from bacon and other meat drippings? C. C. T.

This is the way to make soap, according to the directions prepared by the Agriculture Chemical Research Division of the Department of Agriculture:

"Improve the quality of the household grease by melting it in about an equal volume of hot water. After slowly stirring the mixture for about two minutes, set it aside to cool until the grease has solidified sufficiently so that it can be removed easily from the surface of the water.

"Carefully weigh 2½ pounds of the clarified fat and place in an iron kettle. (Alumnium kettles are not suitable because they are rapidly attacked by the solution of lye.) Heat until the fat is completely melted, then set it off the stove to cool. Meanwhile, dissolve 5½ ounces of lye (the usual contents of a small can), in 11 ounces of water in an iron receptacle, using a wooden paddle for stirring. As soon as the lye is dissolved, add the solution to the lukewarm fat and stir thoroughly. Heat the mixture and stir it from the bottom upward until the lumps have disappeared. To this add 5½ ounces of water and continue the stirring until it is all dissolved in the soap. Then without delay, transfer the soap to a cardboard box of suitable size. After standing 24 hours, remove the soap from the box and cut it into cakes. Before using, the cakes should be allowed to harden for a week or longer in a clean, dry place, away from direct sunlight. If these directions are followed exactly as given, soap will be obtained which contains no free alkali and only about 2 per cent of uncombined fat, which is not at all objectionable.

"Caution: Because of the caustic nature of lye, care should be taken to avoid its contact with the skin or clothing. If it should occur, wash it off at once with quantities of water, follow this treatment with vinegar, if necessary."

Is there any shop in this area interested in handmade wool afghans or aprons? R. C. C.

Because the needs of stores which sell hand made articles vary from time to time, I'm unable to put you in touch with specific stores which will sell your articles. I suggest you look in the classified section of the phone book for gift shops in your area which sell hand made articles. By phoning these shops and talking to the buyer you will be able to find just which shops might be interested in your work.

Man Who Worked Hard to Get Dates With Girl Now Feels Hurt and Baffled Because She Rejects His Love, Refuses to Take Gift-Ring

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Alice is 24 and I am 27. I have known her for about a year and we have dated occasionally, besides seeing each other three nights a week at business school, where we attend evening classes.

Alice is a wonderful girl. Her character and reputation are above reproach. She is shy and reserved and for a long time she wouldn't date me, just because we were fellow students and she didn't want the other pupils speculating about our relationship. She finally agreed to dates on condition that the other students weren't to know; and that's the way it has been.

I have been to her home many times, have met her family and many of her relatives, and last month I told her I loved her. She replied in effect that I am one of the nicest fellows she has ever known, and she likes me a lot, but she couldn't honestly reciprocate my feelings.

If He Understood He'd Feel Better

LAST NIGHT when I took her home after school I gave her a birthstone ring I had bought for her. She praised its beauty, then burst into tears and said she was sorry but she couldn't accept it. When I asked why, she said, "I guess I am in the same boat you are—," and explained that she was in love with someone else who showed no serious interest in her.

I was dumfounded, for we've been seeing each other four nights a week on the average, and she would tell me voluntarily what she did on the other evenings—and only once did she mention a date with another fellow. She said she had known how I felt for a long time, and had spent many sleepless hours trying to figure a solution, because she knew she couldn't care seriously for me.

We are high school graduates, our social, financial and religious backgrounds are the same; and we have many mutual interests. So what is behind this sudden change in Alice? Please tell me that and I will crawl away and lick my wounds as best I can. At present I consider myself the biggest dope imaginable. B. R.

Case of Hoping Without Warrant

DEAR B. R.: I see no evidence of a "sudden change" in Alice. Rather it seems to me that she has mildly discouraged your sentimental interest from the start; and that finally, when you produced a ring, she realized that in fairness she must speak plainly, even at the expense of hurting your feelings and losing your friendship, possibly.

According to your narrative, it was uphill work getting her to consent to dates, and you will recall that she gave your declaration of love a tactful turndown—using the classic phrase that kindly girls usually employ when wrapping a refusal in friendly language.

It has been said "Love is blind," which doubtless explains your brash optimism in fetching a ring after she had negated your court in every way short of being unfriendly; and I daresay her sudden tears were an expression of defensive anxiety, caused by your blind persistence.

Girl Was Square From the Start

IN THAT MOMENT she was probably regretting her mistake—as she saw it—in having admitted you to friendship, even conditionally, against her first preference to stay in the clear and concentrate on her real (though unresponsive) love-interest. I think she was telling the whole truth when she mentioned "someone else," and that there are no other hidden meanings in her attitude.

So for advice: disabuse your mind of the idea that Alice hasn't been honest throughout. Your wounds, such as they are, have been self-induced by wishful thinking that she never instigated nor encouraged—as I see the picture. M. H.

Taste-Tempters From Packaged Mixes

ONE OF THE quickest and most convenient ways of preparing desserts is to use one of the packaged mixes. The directions on the package will tell you how to prepare a simple gingerbread, but here are three suggestions from the Woman's Home Companion that will turn the mix into real party fare.

How about a ginger-nut cake the next time the girls drop in for a foursome of bridge. Be sure to make enough because your family will want to sample it that night for dinner. This is how you do it. Combine ½ cup chopped salted peanuts and 1 package of gingerbread mix. Add liquid according to directions and pour into greased square pan. Sprinkle batter with ¼ cup of peanut halves, bake as directed. Serve warm or cold and for a festive touch add a snowy peak of whipped cream or cream cheese.

A mighty good teatime snack can be made from a gingerbread mix. We call them Fig-coconut Drops. Empty 1 package of gingerbread or gingercake mix into bowl and add ½ cup chopped dried figs and 1 cup shredded coconut; mix well. Add 2/3 cup milk, blend thoroughly. Drop by tablespoonfuls on greased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven about 15 minutes.

A fragrant, tasty pudding will take the doldrums out of any meal. A quick dessert to whip up is this Orange-ginger Pudding. Add 2 tablespoons grated orange rind to 1 package of mix; bake as directed in greased casserole about one hour. Serve hot with apricot sauce, which you make by melting ½ pound marshmallows with 4 teaspoons apricot juice over hot water. Stir until smooth and then add ¾ cup drained mashed apricots. This will make 8 servings.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

The Family "Gripe" Session . . .

Not every good idea will work in all families. And some people may even not think this is a good idea. At least one family found it worked very well, however. So here it is—the family "gripe" session.

The Jones parents were "fed up" with griping. Too often, they found meals were being made unpleasant because childish quarrels arose or because food was criticized. Scolding only made matters worse. Finally, Mrs. Jones, remembering the "truth sessions" of her girlhood, suggested that at one mealtime during the week, the "lid be taken off." Anyone might say anything about the food they wished and criticize one another freely.

After this plan had been followed for a few weeks, she was ready to recommend it to all her friends.

"We've never had such hilarious good times," she said. "Somehow or other, there's no sting to criticism. They're just funny and we all try to think up the worst things we can say. It's a fine safety valve."

Maybe the people in your family won't take to the idea as did the Joneses. But perhaps it's worth a try as a good means to drain off hard feelings instead of having them stored up.

BeBe Shopp, Now Miss America, Always Guarded Her Beauty

By Ida Jean Kain

Being Miss America adds up to "one great big wonderful experience." That's how it seems to BeBe Shopp from Minnesota, the current Miss America. The judges are to be congratulated. They really chose a healthy, happy, beautiful, typical American girl.

BeBe is 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighs 140 pounds. She has Venus' measurements—plus 5 extra inches of height. Bust 37, waist 26, hips 36. But wait . . . checking on Venus, I find her hips were 38—2 inches larger than BeBe's. Our Miss America is healthily streamlined at 140 pounds.

She has never been anythin' but healthy—her parents saw to that. Her food habits are perfect an girls, she eats a good breakfast . . . "I couldn't last the day without it." She loves vegetables, fruits and milk, and doesn't drink coffee.

Was she ever overweight? Yes. Several years ago she weighed 160 pounds, and she lost 20 pounds on a doctor's diet just by cutting out sweets and extra fats. She is strongly opposed to "goofy diets" for growing girls.

But just good food habits could not give her that figure. She goes in for all kinds of sports. Her favorite is swimming, but she also enjoys horseback riding, bowling, skiing, tobogganing and hiking.

I'd like the tall teen-agers to note that BeBe is 5 feet 9 inches—and proud of every inch. If she weren't proud of her height, she would never have been chosen Miss America. She was the tallest child in school clear up to junior high, then one lone boy was taller. She has never been self-conscious about her height because her parents never let her be. When she was a little girl her father started telling her how grand it was to be tall and that a tall girl could have such a beautiful posture. So she naturally aimed toward that beautiful posture all the time.

Her advice along glamous lines: "Act natural and be yourself," she said frankly. "In the long run people can spot it if you're putting on. A girl who is not herself and goes in for artificial glamous may think she is getting some place, but it always shows up. And be interested in people—not self-centered."

This 18-year-old thinks girls should be careful about the boys they date, particularly if they are away from home. "A girl has to find out for herself whether it's a good idea to go steady in high school. But she should be able to talk everything over with her parents."

BeBe is a freshman in college and hopes to get a Master's Degree in music. She plays several musical instruments and takes voice lessons, and is aiming toward television later.

Is she interested in getting married? Certainly—what girl isn't?

The Miss America schedule is definitely not for softies—it really takes a solid foundation of health. And thanks to her parents, good nutrition, and an active outdoor life, BeBe Shopp has what it takes.

Leviten. He is now in the Medical Corps, USN

Cooking Cues

Fresh green peas should be cooked in the smallest amount of boiling water possible—so little that by the time the peas are tender almost all the water will be evaporated and it will not be necessary to drain them. For a flavor change, add a few chopped sauteed mushrooms to the peas and serve with a cream sauce; dust lightly with paprika for an attractive garnish.

Raisins to be put into salads taste especially good if they are "plumped" first. To "plump," wash the raisins in hot water, turn them into a strainer, cover the strainer and place it over boiling water to steam for about 5 minutes. Be sure to chill the plumped raisins before adding them to the salad.

If chicken fat is on hand, it may be used as the shortening in pastry for chicken or meat pie or turnovers.

When poultry is called "New York dressed," it means that the feathers have been removed but it has not been drawn.

Vary the usual bacon-and-tomato sandwich by spreading the bread or toast with soft yellow cheese.

In making sandwiches for small children be sure to cut each sandwich into four triangles or small squares for easy eating.

To make Eggs Benedict put a slice of sauteed ham and a poached egg on half of a toasted English muffin and top with Hollandaise sauce.

Navajo Indians Guests At Cafritz Reception

By Marie McNair

In Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz's modern drawing room blossoming with the smartest of Easter hats, four stalwart, bronze skinned Navajos offered strange contrast.

In the foyer of the Cafritz house on Foxhall rd., symbolic of the season, were two pink-eared white bunnies nestling together in a giant Easter egg fashioned of lavender tulle.

Certainly Morris and Gwen Cafritz gave guests at their annual Easter day reception, conversation pieces in a varied vein!

The Indians came with Mr. and Mrs. Norman Littell, who had entertained them all the morning with a trip to Great Falls, followed by dinner at their Arlington home. Here to plead with the Great White Father for improved conditions of their tribe, the first citizens of our land were unable to speak English well enough to voice impressions of their first Washington party.

Surely they delighted in the view from the terrace, which looks out over the new green leaves, and masses of white dogwood, to the Capitol and the Monument rising from gray skies beyond.

They might also have taken notes on Mrs. Cafritz's frock, the softly molded bodice of white chiffon dropped from the shoulders; the skirt patterned with purple and gold flowers and tied at her slim waist with deep purple velvet ribbon with streamers falling to the hem.

At Tea Table

The colorful visitors from the West found their "fire water" at a bar set up before the wide windows, or a tea table in the dining room with a centerpiece of Easter lilies and white snapdragons. Here Mrs. George Malone, wife of the Senator from Nevada, took her turn at the silver service, and others who served during the afternoon were Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador; Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Clinton Anderson, wife of the Senator from New Mexico; Mrs. Lowell Stockman, in a charming gown of brown satin covered with black lace, a spray of mauve flowers on her hat.

And who was there? Well, just about everyone you could mention. First I saw James Cromwell and his Missus, coming up the winding driveway, and Mrs. McCeney Werlich's cabbage-size poppy on her white hat.

Justice Frank Murphy was there and Senator and Mrs. Dennis Chavez, Senator and Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, the John Steelmans, Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, who had just put her husband on the train for New York and the sessions at U.N.

Charles Carroll Glover and Mrs. Glover, wrapped in furs but without a hat, made their way through the throng to enjoy the bracing air on the terrace. Meade Patrick, the James Parks and Col. Robert Guggenheim, were also among the few to brave the breezes for the view.

Around the fire on the hearth, I saw Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Peyton Gordon, Mrs. Mason Gulick and Mrs. Alex Legare.

And if you'd have more, there were Hawaii's Delegate, Joseph Farrington, and Mrs. Farrington; blonde Fay Lewishon, Mrs. English Gordon, the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Mme. Echegaray; Representative Albert Thomas, Judge George Neilson, and Mrs. Neilson, in flowered skirt and green top, and taffeta bows on her hat.

Mrs. Carlton Holdrege was in fresh navy and white; Mrs. Peter Ansberry matching her rose velvet gloves to the roses on her hat; and Mrs. Sidney Graves, there with Mr. Graves, wore a fetching red straw roller.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Johnston found many friends, so did, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Gen. Virgil Peterson and Mrs. Peterson, who looked pretty as the proverbial pink.

Bernard Gallagher, and Mrs. Gallagher chatted with the James Parks; Mrs. George Thorpe sipped a glass of champagne. Others were Col. and Mrs. Leigh Wade and Helen Wade's sister, Mrs. John Shugrue; Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, Gen. and Mrs. Conger Pratt, the two Marvins-Braverman and Coles; Miss Bertha Joseph in a red, white and blue hat; Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin wearing a smart suit of golden brown satin; Miss Rose Saul, Princess Halim, Gen. and Mrs. Richard Cutts and George Williams.

Mrs. Katharine Byron entertained at an Easter evening buffet supper last night and Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken were hosts at a holiday luncheon.

The loss of a practically priceless Heppelwhite dining table in a moving van fire last week hasn't in the least affected the hospitality of Gay Prospect, Mrs. Byron's house on Williamsburg lane.

The table which belonged to Katharine Byron's grandmother, was en route from Williamsport, Md. to Mrs. Byron's new house here, and was destroyed along with other antiques in the van. But Gay Prospect, although new, is perfectly furnished with Katharine Byron's possessions, many of them old family pieces.

Kefauvers Honored

Senator and Mrs. Estes Kefauver were honor guests at the Byron party and among the guests were the Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Seven thousand home-town teams that work as one

The men and women who furnish telephone service in your community are home-town folks, a group of good neighbors both on and off the job.

You'll find them willingly taking part in local civic affairs—serving as members of your school association and church committees, active in your service clubs and welfare work.

Working together as a team, they operate, install and maintain telephone equipment so that you and your neighbors may enjoy dependable, round-the-clock service.

They also belong to a nation-wide telephone organization. This is the Bell System. Here, the same idea of teamwork prevails. In more than 7,000 central offices across the nation are thousands of Bell telephone people using standard tools and methods so that you can talk to almost anyone else, anywhere else—clearly, quickly and at reasonable cost.

Yes, teamwork in your home town—and throughout the country—has helped make this nation's telephone service the finest in the world.

One on the Aisle—

Warner's 'Dream' A Sure Depressive

By Richard L. Coe

"MY DREAM IS YOURS," at the Warner, is a supremely dull achievement about a girl who makes good in Hollywood Not even the Technicolored presence of Eve Arden keeps it from being a complete depressive.

Apart from the overpowering lethargy such a film evokes, what really bothers me about pictures like "My Dream Is Yours" is the complete lack of a sense of values.

Here you have a parade of characters who, apart from being crashing bores, base their whole lives and actions on the belief that plush living and money, money, money is the be-all of life. This is so much the rule of the Hollywood films that its false approach to life is taken completely for granted; by even mentioning it, for instance, I lay myself open to derision.

Yet, suppose this shallow, purely physical acceptance of life spreads. Suppose all America actually began acting like the grasping, ambitious heels one sees reflected in such pictures. What sort of country are we to become?

Jack Carson plays a talent agent who breaks with his conceited meal ticket, Singer Lee Bowman. He's anxious to please the sponsor of Lee's radio program, S. Z. Sakall, who relishes Viennese music for a show called "The Hour of Enchantment." So he goes to New York, borrowing the money, picks up an unknown "hot" singer, Doris Day, lugs her back to the coast, where she falls in love with Bowman.

Getting the girl a singing spot turns out to be harder—and duller—than all expect. Finally things work out just as you know they will all along.

Poor, Unwanted Eve Arden

But the accent throughout is on the Technicolored surface; the girl is said to be a war widow. She has as cute a little son as anyone ever had, but he's immediately surfeited with so many gifts that even Carson remarks he's afraid the lad is being spoiled.

Spoiled, indeed. The rise to riches, evidently within just a few months, is accompanied by lavish living, elegant clothes, autograph seekers, mention in L. O. Parson's column and all the flub-dub of success on the Hollywood scale.

Go on and tell me, now, that this is what the public likes; that it revels in these day dreams of easy riches. Maybe it does and maybe all this pap isn't going to hurt anyone in the long run. The fact remains why do all musical movies have to be about Virtue's Progress in Show Business?

On its own grounds the script by Harry Kurnitz and Dane Lussier is from hunger, coming to life only when Eve Arden is around to bend a line to her tart style. And speaking of Eve, why is it that she, strikingly attractive, wittier and more human than other females in her pictures, is always pictured as lonely, unwanted, unsung. In real life, I'm sure, Eve is the belle of the ball.

Jack Carson, whose tricks are wearing thin, and Miss Day, who's being made into a carbon Betty Hutton, get most of the close-ups. Duncan Richardson, by the way, is the blond little lad who plays Doris' son.

The best songs are the old ones: "I'l String Along With You," "You Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby" and "Nagasaki.'

BALTIMORE has two plays this week, the National Capital, as usual, none . . . Joe E. Brown is playing "Harvey" this week at Ford's and over at the Maryland, Harry Wagstaff Gribble and Ben Futcher are presenting "Anna Lucasta," now on its fifth national tour.

SATURDAY NIGHT brought the opening of another Drive-In Theater . . . Though this latest in the vest numbers that will be luring the cars this summer is 160 miles away, near Newport News, it has partial Washington sponsorship . . . Sidney Lu t, the lively Washington impressario, is a cosponsor of this lush new auto theater . . . Today, by the way, is a busy one for Lust . . . This morning is his annual Easter Egg party for Prince Georges County youngsters and this afternoon he hosts several hundred capitalites to luncheon and the opening ballgame.

Housing Bill's Passage Seen

By The Associated Press

Senator Ellender (D., La.) predicted yesterday that the multi-billion dollar long range housing program will escape any economy drive in Congress this year.

Ellender, chief Democratic sponsor of the bipartisan housing bill, told a reporter he was basing his forecast "on the fact the program will cost the Federal Government only a comparatively small amount the first year."

The Senate will resume debate on the bill today. Backers of the measure are hoping for a final vote Tuesday. If passed, as expected, it would then go to the House.

The bill provides for 810,000 public housing units in six years and for a vast five-year slum clearance program.

The Senate passed somewhat similar bills last year and in 1946. Both died in the House.

To finance the public housing program, the Federal Government would constribute to local communities up to 308 million dollars annually over a 40-year period. The five-year slum clearance project would cost 500 million dollars in grants. The bill also provides for one billion dollars in loans for clearing blighted areas.

Ellender noted that of the total, a maximum of 85 million dollars for public housing is provided for the first year. During the same period no more than 100 million dollars could be appropriated for slum clearance.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Lint Hints Include One For Contortionists

My recent complaint that I couldn't keep the lint off my tux or blue serge suit has resulted in several suggestions from resourceful readers.

Lieut. Santo J. Barca, of the Navy's Bureau of Personnel, was the first to respond—natch. He says:

"Our blues in the Navy catch more lint than any law allows; so let me pass along this tip to fellow sufferers.

"Wind a length or two of masking tape around your hand, then rub with the weave, across the suit. You'll pick up the lint and discard your whiskbroom in nothing flat."

Michael B. Callahan of 1512 Roosevelt ave., Falls Church, Va., is also partial to the tape method; he suggests ordinary adhesive tape, used "sticky side out."

"Pat the suit lightly," says Mike, "and watch the lint come off. You can clean a suit in about 5 minutes.

"Friend wife comes in very handy if you're doing your cleaning while wearing the suit—especially when you're trying to work on the back of the coat. However, with a little agility, the wearer can do the job himself."

Hmmm. This I would have to see.

Martin M. Klein, of the Martin-Manning store on New York ave., should also know something about keeping lint off a tuxedo—because formal wear is his business. Martin makes three suggestions for those whose suits come back from the cleaners full of lint:

1. Use a slightly moistened whisk broom or a slightly dampened terry cloth.

2. Lay the suit flat, sprinkle common table salt over it, and brush it with an ordinary clothes brush.

3. Change dry cleaners.

9:30 MEANS 9:30

Adrian van Zuylen is 7 years old. He had been parked with Grandma (Mrs. W. Bowyer Pain of 3033 16th st. nw.) for two weeks while the van Zuylen family was moving into a new house.

When the two weeks were up, Pop (Johan Adrian van Zuylen) promised that he'd come by at 9:30 p. m. and take Adrian to his new home.

But Pop was slightly delayed, and when 9:30 came, Adrian felt that it was time to get going—father or no father.

So the 7-year-old traveler started out on foot. Then he boarded a streetcar for Silver Spring. But he couldn't remember which bus he was supposed to take for the final phase of the journey.

So he asked a cab driver, and the hacker delivered the lad to his home, no charge.

As you can imagine, the van Zuylens and Pains were in something of a dither b that time, and were much relieved to see Adrian step out of that cab. So relieved, in fact, that they forgot to get the name of the friendly cab driver, so that they could thank him properly.

Anyhow, if that hacker has been wondering why his young passenger was traveling alone—this should explain things.

NO EL

Mrs. James F. Wake of Patuxent River, Md., suspects that this newspaper has one linotype machine which has no letter "L" on it. As evidence, she submits a clipping from a recent story:

"He was inside a bind-fying hood, earning to piot the pane by instrument, the compaint sets out. The pane went into a dive. The suit contends that it was the responsibiity of Rapp, outside the hood, to take over the contros, and get the pane back on an even kee."

YOUR MOVE, JOE

Leonidas Beall of 6420 Western ave., Chevy Chase, Md., slyly observes:

"I see that headquarters for the famous Liars Club has been moved from Burlington, Wis., to Moscow."

Democrats Plan Summer Session

By Drew Pearson

A tip-off that the Democrats are definitely planning a special session of Congress this summer was let out of the bag the other day by Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas. He tipped his hand in a recent private conversation with Senator James Eastland, Mississippi Dixiecrat.

Senator Taft

Eastland stopped Lucas in the Senate cloakroom and with a shrug toward the Senate floor, remarked:

"What are the Republicans doing, trying a slow filibuster to wreck the President's program?"

"Yeah," snorted Lucas, looking both ways to make sure no Republicans were within earshot. "But they're just cutting their own throats. We're going to get the President's program through.

"We're going to let them go on like they are until we adjourn," he continued. "Then we'll call a special session this summer and come back and pass the President's program. After that, we'll go to the people and tell them the reason we had to call a special session was because the Republicans caused a sitdown strike in the United States Senate.

"There isn't a man on the Republican side who has any idea of politics," Lucas added. "As long as they have men like Wherry (Minority Leader Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska), they're not going to get anywhere."

Taft and New Deal

Probably more than anyone else, Senator Robert Taft of Ohio is the personification of the Republican Party. Therefore, when he called for a broader social program in an off-the-cuff speech the other day, it had the effect of shifting the GOP cornerstone a few points to the left.

Taft's statement was delivered behind closed doors and was meant only for the ears of Republican Senators. Part of what he said has already leaked to the press, but for the first time here is the full story of what happened.

The stage was set for Taft's remark by his Ohio colleague, Senator John Bricker, who called for a tightening of the economic belt and a return to the standards of Republican thrift.

Bricker's preaching was chiefly aimed against public housing, and in favor of his neat strategy to kill public housing by tacking an anti-segregation amendment on the bill. This would drag civil rights into the housing fight and split the Democratic Party right down the Mason-Dixon Line. Bricker suggested limiting debate on the anti-segregation amendment by two-thirds cloture and, for political reasons, divorcing the arguments from the public-housing issue.

Taft Gets Tense

After more of this kind of talk from Mundt of South Dakota and Malone of Nevada, Taft jumped to his feet and tensely took the arch-conservatives to task. It was time, he declared, to draw the line between the Democratic and Republican Parties. The difference, he said, was not in ideals but in methods.

"The Republicans stand for improved standards of living," he crackled. "But we believe in welfare without regimentation."

He contended that Federal aid for housing, health and education "do not depart from the basic principles" of the Constitution. Republicans are already supporting welfare programs in the cities—including slum clearance, free medical service and free education, he pointed out. Federal aid was just an extension of this program, he said.

"Of course, Republicans must support the free-enterprise system," Taft warned. "But we had better take care of those in the lowest income brackets or we will lose the free-enterprise system."

He then invited Senators Bricker, Mundt and Malone to "come down and take a look at our slum conditions."

"If we follow the Mundt-Malone line," he warned, "there won't be any Republican Party."

Bricker's Background

Taft got a big hand from his colleagues, after which Bricker broke in sharply.

"I don't want to be placed in the category of someone who is against people," he snapped. "All my life I have given 10 to 15 per cent of my income to charity. For several years I have served on the Community Chest. I am as deeply concerned about the common man as anyone else."

Bricker didn't mention, of course, the fact that he is a director of the Buckeye State Building and Loan Association, affiliated with the powerful United States Savings and Loan League, and a part of the real estate and anti-housing lobby. At one time the league's bulletin gleefully boasted how Bricker had obligingly introduced four Senate bills to help the lobby.

The man who got Bricker his job with Buckeye is his staunch political supporter, John Galbreath, a power among Ohio real estate-financial circles. Ohio politicians sometimes say that Bricker does not even shave in the morning without consulting Galbreath.

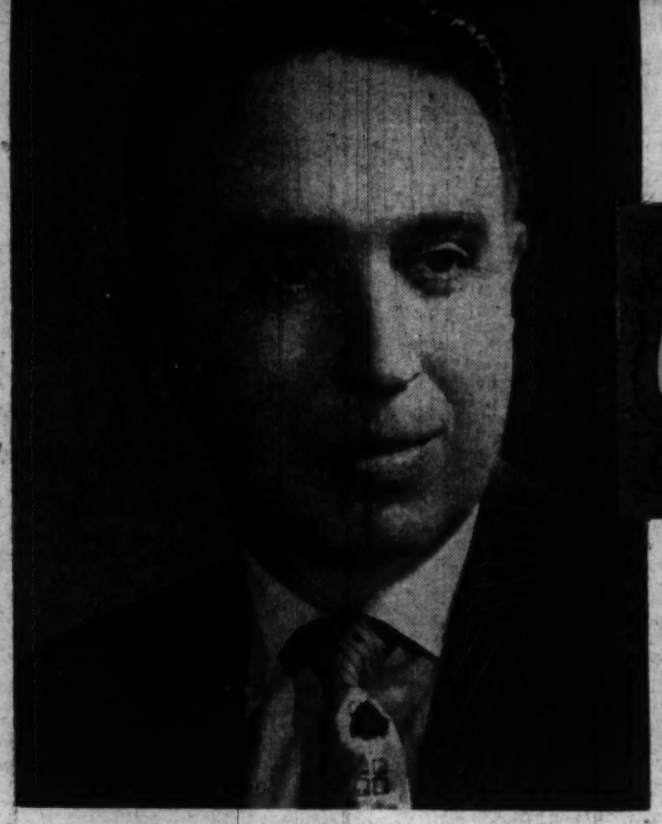
Number 11 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News



This is EARL DORFMAN, our Display Director. His successes in the display world are equaled only by his frustrations as a camera fan. The source of his frustration . . . his two sons who refuse to stand still long enough for him to record their clever antics for posterity. Earl has been with The Hecht Co. for 6 years. He attended Pratt Institute in New York City, where he studied architectural design and commercial art. Earl is also quite a seaman. Owns an outboard motor . . . some day hopes to get a boat to put under it.

Curtain Going Up...

SAYS EARL DORFMAN, DISPLAY DIRECTOR OF THE HECHT CO.

Curtain going up . . . ! Oops, it looks like murder in three acts. But, it's not a play . . . and the people aren't actors . . . they're displaymen in the process of dressing a Hecht Co. window. It's a display that will be seen by over 180,000 people. What does it take to keep The Hecht Co. dressed in our Sunday best every day in the week? In an average year it takes about 1,000 individual window displays . . . over 10,000 interior displays . . . it takes over 55,000 man-hours of work. These presentations require hours . . . days . . . yes, even months of planning, research and preparation. (Our Walt Disney animated windows take as long as 8 months preparation.) Each display requires scale blueprint drawings . . . the work of many carpenters and painters . . . the masterful application of the artists' touch. The display world is no longer a realm of fantasy. Today it demands life-like props . . . simple, interesting design . . . a straightforward setting of an idea in action . . . of merchandise and how it can best benefit you. As a civic-minded, community-conscious store, The Hecht Co. devotes many of its windows to educational and cultural subjects. But whether it's merchandise or a nine window presentation reflecting the political history of the U. S. A. . . . the display department reaps it reward from the "I didn't know that!" look on a man's face as he views one of our graphic informative stories . . . from all the kids who bring their Mommies down to 7th and F St. to see a life size Mickey Mouse in action . . . from the sparkle in a teen ager's eyes as she imagines herself dressed in a yellow net, strapless evening gown. "When the curtain goes up," says Earl Dorfman, "The Hecht Co. passes in review for more than 1,000,000 people of the Washington Metropolitan Area."
